

Tribal member Audrey Mercier watches as Brain Krehbiel, Tribal member and Tribal cultural protection site monitor, shows her how to weave a strip of cedar bark into a rose during the K-5 Summer Culture Camp on Tuesday, Aug. 3. Thirty-nine elementary school students participated in the camp while 10 middle school students helped with the camp through a leadership program.

Tribal member Moses Mercier prepares to take a bite of a cookie from K-5 Chinuk Wawa teacher and Tribal member Kathy Cole as they practice for a Chinuk Wawa jeopardy game during K-5 Summer Culture Camp on Tuesday, Aug. 3. To prepare for the game, students were blindfolded and fed various foods, and then they needed to say in Chinuk what the food was that they ate.

Photos by Michelle Alaimo

Tribal member Micah Rogers practices drawing Columbia River art during a cultural art lesson taught by Youth Education Culture Specialist Travis Mercier during the K-5 Summer Culture Camp on Tuesday, Aug. 3.

2010 Culture Camp

Tribal member Nick Colton checks out a beaver pelt during a field trip to Champoeg State Heritage Area on Thursday, Aug. 5, that was part of the K-5 Summer Culture Camp. Students learned about the history of Champoeg, which included the importance of the area to Kalapuya Indians, during their visit to the park.