

Taking a spring break

The Tribe's Youth Education Department held its annual Spring Break camping trip to Camp Westwind in Lincoln City on Monday through Wednesday, March 25-27. The more than 40 youth who participated were divided into clans and the clans competed against each other in events, such as a treasure chest hunt, an obstacle course, mini-challenges and skits.

Nolan DeLoe, 18 months, sits on Kayla Grijalva's lap and drums during Youth Education's Spring Break camping trip at Camp Westwind in Lincoln City on Tuesday, March 26. Nolan was there with his mother, Kristy DeLoe, right, Tribal Food Services coordinator, who cooked the meals for the camp.

Visit the Tribe's facebook page to see more photos

Chyanne Schlappe helps Travis Stewart, Youth Education Culture specialist, paint a carving during Youth Education's Spring Break camping trip at Camp Westwind in Lincoln City on Tuesday, March 26. Every year a carving is left at the camp from the group.

True Gibbons drinks milk during the obstacle course of Youth Education's Spring Break camping trip at Camp Westwind in Lincoln City on Tuesday, March 26. One of the stops on the course involved clan members from each team working together to drink a whole pitcher of milk. Standing next to him is one of his clan members, Anthony Simmons.

Photos by Michelle Alaimo

Alex Thorsgard, middle, places a plastic cup as she works with her clan members to build a tower out of cups during a mini-challenge at Youth Education's Spring Break camping trip at Camp Westwind in Lincoln City on Tuesday, March 26. They won the challenge by building the tallest tower. Other clan members include Nick Larsen, left, Logan Bobb, second from left, Ezra Pacheco, second from right, and Chyanne Schlappe.