Open house

Dodie McKenzie, Tribal Vocational Rehabilitation caseworker, and Anthony Cook meet during the Vocational Rehabilitation Program Open House held at Adult Education on Wednesday, Sept. 10. Cook is a student at Chemawa Indian School in Salem and came to the open house with Stephanie Wood, left, an education technician at the school. The purpose of the open house was to connect with community professionals and Tribal families to inform them of the program's services with a focus on youth transition.

Durschmidt 60th anniversary

Catherine B. Durschmidt of Grand Ronde, Ore., met Curtis W. Russell Jr. of Canton, Miss., in Portland while he was on leave. Catherine was working for Consolidated Freightway. They were married on Aug. 7, 1954, her grandmother Dollie Leno Pichette Baker's birthday, at All Saints Catholic Church in Portland. Their daughter, Tricia, was born the next year in Astoria while Curtis was on shore duty following a stint as a frogman, now known as Navy Seals. During Curtis' duty in Hawaii, Catherine worked as a photographer at Honolulu Airport. Curtis worked a year and a half on swift boats in Vietnam before returning. He started working as a mechanic foreman for Coos Trucking. Catherine served as chairman of her local precinct. She attends St. Monica, volunteers for the American Red Cross, Bay Area Hospital Auxiliary and still enjoys bowling, in which she has won several medals in the Oregon State Games. They are blessed with three grandchildren (Liberty, Curtis and Carrie) and four great-grandchildren (Chandra, Taylor, Ryan and Noah). Curtis and Catherine ("Kitty") are so grateful for all the special memories shared with their family, friends and our Tribal family.
