NATIVE PLANT WORKSHOP

JANUARY 29, 2015
1:30 - 4:30 PM
CHACHALU

Join the Land & Culture Department and Institute for Applied Ecology for a hands-on Native Plant Propagation Workshop.

Native plants are becoming more popular as homeowners look for plants that adapt well to our climate and soil conditions, celebrate our local landscape, and provide food and shelter for native wildlife and pollinators.

Learn the basics of native species propagation, by seed and cuttings, in this hands-on workshop. You will take home a mixed flat of native plant seeds and containers of cuttings. We will discuss cultural uses of native plants, seed and cutting collection, ethical issues, plant care, pests and cleaning techniques.
