Congratulations to our medal winners and thanks to all who participated.

Book Review: “Hate List” by Jennifer Brown is a story about a school shooting at Garvin High School in a small Midwest town where everybody knows their neighbors and their business.

Valerie is the main character and she tells the story from her point of view. Her role in the shooting leaves her guilt ridden, bullied and abandoned by her friends, family and community. Valerie struggles to go on living. With the help of a therapist, Dr. Hieler, who helps Valerie sort out “who she really is on the inside,” and an unexpected ally in Jessica, who is her biggest nemesis, Valerie may be able to find a reason to keep living.

I liked the perfect ending of the book. Jessica will be seen as a villain by some and as a hero to others. Can Jessica and Valerie begin the healing process after such a tragedy? Will the suffering ever ease so Valerie can find a reason to keep on living? Will Valerie ever be able to look to her future with hope?

This is a must-read for all young adult readers because the story gives you the opportunity to self-evaluate with characters: the parents, principal and students at the school. The characters come alive in the writing, I found myself empathizing with each point of view. I encourage you read this book to feel the story inside yourself, because there may be a Valerie or Jessica in you wanting to learn a new way to believe in your own self and to never give up!

Jennifer Brown saw her first book selected as an ALA Best Book for Young Adults, a VOYA Perfect Ten and a School Library Journal Best Book of the Year. I invite you to come to the Tribal Library and check out this book. – Rachelle Kellogg
