

BMX STEM program

After assembling her BMX bike, Samantha Bishop pumps air in the tires with the help of Corrina Ikkakoula, a Tribal account executive with Bonneville Power Administration, during the BMX STEM (Science, Technology, Engineering and Mathematics) Program held at Youth Education on Wednesday, Aug. 17. The program provided 30 youths a hands-on experience of building a BMX bike while learning the science and engineering behind BMX racing. The Tribe partnered with BPA, the Boy Scouts of America and the Army Corps of Engineers for the program. BMX racer Donny Robinson, who won a bronze medal in the 2008 Summer Olympics, also was in attendance and helped assemble some bikes.
