Book Review: “A Gathering of Flowers: Stories About Being Young in America,” edited by Joyce Carol Thomas.

There is such wide diversity among us all. In “Gathering of Flowers,” the 11 stories are from all across America. Youth share stories of their personal lives. Join me to take a journey into the diverse life stories with these youth.

Whether you believe in an ice sculpture named “Trickster,” the one who brings a family together with their community. This writer never tells you the meaning of the “Trickster” so it is left up to the reader to figure out.

“The Harrington’s Daughter” is a beautiful story of parents’, grandparents’ and childrens’ emotional way of dealing with death.

“Going For the Moon” is by far one of the most gripping stories in the collection. I connected most with this story. The writer expresses how grateful he is for the opportunity to attend Last Chance High School; he credits the school for saving his life.

A memorable quote from him grabs your heart. He says, “I’m learning how giving is more important than to all the time taking and receiving.” I personally felt I connected to his thoughts that seemed to be so real.

Last Chance High School is going through budget cuts that could close the school for good. To quote the writer, “This joint is too good a thing to lose. Mr. Cleveland keeps me up on all such as that.”
