Tribal author's book acquired by Tu Books

Tribal Elder Charlene Willing McManis' book "Indian No More" has been acquired by Tu Books for publication scheduled to occur in the fall of 2019.

"Indian No More" is a middle grade novel set in the 1950s. It tells the story of a 10-year-old Umpqua girl and her family's Tribal rights being terminated and they must relocate from their Reservation in Oregon to Los Angeles, where they are expected to assimilate.

McManis is the daughter of Charles Willing and Chitsh Maud, who were born on the Grand Ronde Reservation. She lived in Grand Ronde until she was 4 when her family relocated to Los Angeles as part of the federal relocation program.

"I'm hoping to let children know about this event and how it affected us," McManis said.

McManis, 64, lives in Vermont. ■

Walking On...

Karel Ann Ling

March 23, 1940 – Nov. 3, 2017

Tribal Elder Karel Ann (Gregg) Ling, 77, was called to our Heavenly Father on the morning of Friday, Nov. 3, 2017, in Kailua, Hawai'i, surrounded by family, neighbors and church friends.

Karel was born in Bend, Ore., on March 23, 1940, to Kenneth and Naomi Gregg. She met her husband, Kenneth K.M. Ling (deceased), while attending Linfield College in McMinnville where she graduated with a bachelor's degree in Social Work.

Both Karel and Kenneth used their Social Work degrees to help many challenged youths during their tenure as Palama Settlement. Karel went on to work at the Hawai'i Children's Justice Center and Koolau Boys Home (Hawai'i Youth Correctional Center). Karel retired in 2002 from the Communications Department at Marine Corps Base Hawai'i.

Karel loved her fellowship with Kailua Christian Church, her Bible studies with classes from Bible Institute of Hawai'i and being a member of the Windward YMCA Ys Men's Club, donating her time to helping others.

Karel is survived by her three sons, Scot (Pauahi), Mark (Rennie) and Lance (Shana), and two daughters, Heidi Cummings (Walter Jr.) and Heather Bernal (Eric Sr.). She also is survived by her siblings, Karon Chapman, Robert Reed, Val Reed and Rick Reed, as well as 16 grandchildren and 11 great-grandchildren.

A celebration of life was held at Borthwick Mortuary on Mauna Kea Street on Friday, Dec. 1. Visitation and viewings were held at 9:30 a.m. and the service was held at 10:30 a.m. with lunch following.

Burial was held on the same day at 2 p.m. at Hawaiian Memorial Park. Aloha attire was requested.

Native organizations condemn Trump's slur

NORMAN, Okla. – The Native American Journalists Association joined the National Congress of American Indians in condemning President Donald Trump's use of the name "Pocahontas" in a derogatory manner while honoring World War II veteran Navajo code talkers on Monday, Nov. 27, during a White House ceremony.

"We call on our colleagues in journalism to be responsible and accurate in their reporting on this important issue that affects the perceptions of Native people and communities," NAJA said in a press release.

"When an elected official or their publicly funded information officer use the name of a Native person or Nation with the intent to demean or denigrate, it shapes the public perception of that person and their Tribe across the nation and around the world."

NAJA said that when President Trump uses the name of Pocahontas as a pejorative with the intent to insult, it becomes a racial slur.

Trump's use of Pocahontas was aimed at Massachusetts Sen. Elizabeth Warren, who claimed to have Native ancestry during her run for public office.

NCAI also called on Trump to refrain from using her name in a way that denigrates her legacy on Nov. 27. Pocahontas was a member of the Pamunkey Indian Tribe in Virginia and still holds a significant place in the history and culture of her Tribe.

NAJA includes approximately 500 members representing Tribal, nonprofit, freelance and mainstream media professionals in promoting accurate coverage of Indian Country. ■
