Bull blast

Riley Freeman rides Boots during the Mid-Summer Bull Blast competition held at the Tribal Rodeo Arena on Saturday, July, 14. In a bucking bull competition, the bulls, not the riders, are judged. The bulls are judged on their ability to buck, kick and spin, and for their intensity and degree of difficulty. During the event, Tribal Council Chairwoman Cheryle A. Kennedy gave a presentation in remembrance of Tribal member and the arena founder Marvin Kimsey, who walked on on March 4. She discussed Kimsey's rodeo career. He found his love for the sport while rounding up wild mustangs in Warm Springs as a young man. The original arena was located on Spirit Mountain Casino property, but Kimsey had the arena moved to Tribal grounds for more space. He became Rodeo Committee chairman and gathered volunteers to create the arena. Kennedy also gifted Kimsey's son, Tribal Elder Duke Kimsey, a Pendleton blanket. The Bull Blast was hosted by the Tribe and presented by Radranch Bucking Bulls, owned by Tribal member Dave Cantwell and his wife, Rhonda, and bulls competing in the event were from the High Desert Bucking Bull Association.
