

Attendees take a closer look at Tribal artist Dakota Zimmer’s multi-layered image of a Western scrub bird during the opening of Chachalu Museum and Cultural Center’s new “Ikanum” exhibit on Thursday, Jan. 19. This digital photograph joins other art mediums in the multi-artist installation featuring stories from throughout the Pacific Northwest. The exhibit will run through Friday, April 14.

Exhibit opening

Cultural Advisor Bobby Mercier and Cultural Protection Specialist Chris Bailey examine a carved cedar installation at Chachalu Museum and Cultural Center’s new “Ikanum” exhibit. The cedar carving was created by Tribal artist Greg A. Robinson in 2015.

Attendees are welcomed with drumming to Chachalu’s new “Ikanum” exhibit. The new exhibit at the Tribe’s Museum and Cultural Center is a multi-artist installation featuring stories from throughout the Pacific Northwest.

TO SEE MORE PHOTOS
Find us on
SmokeSignalsCTGR

Photos by Kamiah Koch

Tribal Council member Jon A. George and Chachalu Museum and Cultural Center Senior Administrative Assistant Tammy Cook walk together through the new “Ikanum” exhibit at Chachalu Museum and Cultural Center on Thursday, Jan. 19.