THE WRECK OF THE CATTLEFAD.

By CHRISTINE NESS.

The wreck of the Cattlefada occurred last week, in a small lake near the town of McFerrin, Kansas. The vessel, which was a small, wooden, twelve-ton boat, had been built by the late owner, who was well known for his skill as a shipbuilder. The boat was being taken to a nearby town for repairs when it suddenly capsized, killing the only survivor. The cause of the accident is still unknown, but it is believed that the vessel was overloaded with cargo.

A COLUMBUS STATUE

The story of a British founder's statue is too long to be told here. It is a tale of courage and heroism, and of the struggle against adversity. The statue, which is now preserved in the city of London, was erected in honor of one of the greatest of all British leaders. The founder, who was also a great scholar and statesman, was a man of great vision and courage. He believed in the power of ideas and in the importance of intellectual freedom. His statue stands as a symbol of the ideals that he fought for, and it serves as a reminder of the importance of standing up for what is right.

THE CUSTERS.

A little girl, who was playing in the park, was found dead in her playpen. The girl's mother was overcome with grief and turned to her husband for comfort. The husband, who was also upset, said, "I know how you feel. I lost my own child, and I know how it feels to lose someone you love."
