EDITORIAL: Aginaldo has been dead about long enough for another resurrection.

The Oregonian says: "Unfortunately, neither the Boers nor the British know when they get the worst of it."

England has fallen a little short in her pacification of the Boers and has made a call upon this country for 50,000 more horses to aid in the project.

The announcement that natives are being landed in South Africa, to work the Rhodesian mines, in chain gangs, recalls the civilization of the Dark Ages and reminds us that the search light of liberty has not thrown its piercing rays through that benighted land with any beneficial effect to its former inhabitants, while the civilization of the usurpers is none too high.

Things of a contrary nature sometimes mature almost together, for instance, the Myrtle Point Enterprise, of last week, tells us of the hills all around town being white capped with snow, and in the same issue tells of W. L. Krantz, prosecuting the office during the week, with a ripe tomato and ends up with "Ripening fruits in mid winter is evidence of our mild and equable climate."

The U. S. government has planted and replanted her flag in cities and towns in the Philippines, has planted many of her citizens in Philippine soil, prepared many Filipinos for planting and to still further experiment in that salubrious climate, will now try planting seeds from America to see what plants are best adapted to that soil.

The Chinese question may take on a new lease of interest again. The envoys have failed to sign the terms dictated by the powers, and it is stated that, at Siah Fu, where the court is at present, there are 85,000 Chinese troops drilling continuously.

Would Have Been Useful: The blunders of the awkward speaker always prove a source of merriment, and the ridiculousness of the following speech, made by a New Hampshire man just after the ceremony was over which united him to his second wife, is no exception to the rule.

"Neighbors," he said to those who had witnessed the simple ceremony, "you all know that this good friend that's consented to marry me is something of a stranger in our town. Now I feel kind of insufficient, being only a man, to make her acquainted with everybody as quick as I'd like to. So I'm going to depend on you women folks," he added, with a confident smile at the members of the gentler sex, "to make her feel at home among us, just as my first wife would do if she was here today. I miss her considerable all the time, but won't usual on an occasion like this!"

School Report: The following is a report of the public school at Prosper for the month ending Jan. 9, 1901.

Came a Week Too Soon.

So Mr. Hume is Abundantly Ready for the Session. R. D. Hume, Joint Representative for Coos and Curry, arrived yesterday morning. Mr. Hume has already established his headquarters at Salem, and will return to that city to-day.

"I shall urge upon the Legislature some measure for the relief of Curry County," said Mr. Hume. "We are a poor people, with a sparse population, and we derive no benefit, whatever from the state taxes we are called upon to pay. We have built an expensive road 30 miles in length across the mountains into California, at a cost of $50,000, and we are unable to maintain it. We think the state should take it off our hands or remit our state taxes, or provide some other relief, so that we can get along somewhat better."

"It seems to me, too, that the present game laws are ridiculous. I doubt if they are constitutional. For example, I do not know what right the law has to declare that no man shall sell game if he came into lawful possession thereof. It seems to me that it thus says to a man that he cannot sell or barter that which is his own. I think the matter of regulating the slaughter of game should be left to the County Courts, which might impose a license upon persons not residents of the county who come there to hunt." - Oregonian.

Progress of a Century.

The population of the United States a century ago was 3,398,483; today it is approximately 76,250,000. In 1800 the area of Uncle Sam's domain was 827,844 square miles, and it extended only from the Atlantic ocean to the Mississippi river. Now, excluding the newly acquired islands, it is 3,625,600 square miles. Save for the annexation of Texas, all of this additional territory has been acquired by series of purchases, the total sum paid being only $49,000,000.

A century ago only six cities had a population of 8,000 or more; today there are 500 cities in this country with over 8,000 inhabitants. In 1800 Virginia was the most populous state, with 886,190 people. Pennsylvania came next with 692,545; New York next, with 586,350; and Massachusetts next, with 422,845. New York City was the largest town, with 9,419 inhabitants; Philadelphia next, with 11,229; Baltimore next, with 26,514; and Boston next, with 24,957.

The territory northwest of the Ohio in 1800 gave returns of a population numbering 45,393; Mississippi territory reported 8,899; and Indiana territory 1,875. In New York state were enumerated 20,613 slaves; in New Jersey 12,422 slaves; and in Pennsylvania 17,000 slaves.

There were in the whole United States a century ago 1,002,387 log rafts, whereas the number of them today is about 8,000,000. Though they have multiplied so largely, the proportion they bear to the white population is only about two-thirds what it was in 1800.

General Miles and Others. Bullied by the North American. General Miles has an unimpaired military record covering nearly 40 years. He never was accused of leaving his post without permission on the eve of battle, his superior officers never recommended that he be dismissed for cowardice; he never pretended to be hurt to avoid danger on the field, and he never has been charged with using his official power to enable his friends and family to make money at the expense of the health and lives of American soldiers.

Texas a Great State.

Canasian: The census returns not only show that Texas is by far the largest state in the Union being large enough to have a great empire of its own within its borders, but is one of the most peculiar ones also. For example, the returns show Daily county has but four residents, Cochran has twenty-five, Andrews has thirty-seven, Lynn seventeen and Dawson thirty-six. Twenty-five other counties have a population of less than five hundred. Some counties have no running streams within their boundaries, some are hundreds of miles from any railroad, and there are almost wholly inhabited by prairie dogs, jack rabbits and rattlesnakes. Tera Green county, the largest in the state, is larger than the whole state of Ohio and has 6,804 inhabitants.

Rode Before the Storm.

London Tit Bits: A very witty fellow was Tom Brown, a farmer, who being out on horseback one day, was overtaken by a thunderstorm and being a shed by the side of the road, rode into it. There was, however, but room to get the fore part of the horse and himself out of the rain, consequently the hind part of the horse got wet.

"Hello, Brown! how is it that you and the fore part of the horse muddy and the hind part wet?" "Oh, Oh," said Brown, "that's the way to do it. I rode before the storm all the way, and it never got wetter to me than the back of the saddle."

Exchange: Perhaps the most hopelessly pauperized inhabitants of any territory belonging to the United States are the natives of Alaska, now numbering 12,000. They are penniless, without food or fuel, since their country has been overrun with gold seekers. The fur-bearing animals are nearly extinct. The poverty of the natives bars them from purchasing clothing, the scant supply of timber is appropriated by the invaders, they can now secure few fish and altogether their condition is pitiable. Since the United States owns the territory they inhabit, and they cannot quit it, the Government ought to provide for their necessities, and that immediately. It is shameful to leave these ignorant helpless creatures to starve to death as they are doing.

Oregonian: The British were exasperated because they could not find the Boers. Now they are more exasperated because they did find them. Now they want money.
