A Surgical Operation.

The Army and Navy Journal tells this story about the late Dr. Lewis A. Sayre of New York city:

"When a young medical student at the College of Physicians and Surgeons In New York, one of the operating physletans was about to cut off an Irishman's leg, but before beginning the operation gave a long talk to the students on amputation. The Irishman lay on the operating table in full possession of his faculties, and as he listened to the discourse he grow whiter and whiter. Finally he jumped from the operating table, crying: 'Get me me breech es, be gold. I'll die with me leg on And with that he was out of the room.

"Dr. Sayre found him several days later with his knee badly swollen. The young dector promptly cut open the knee, but saved the leg. One day he had no lint to bind the wound, so he used the tow stuffing sticking out of an old horsehalr sofa. When he called again, be found the wound so much improved that he reasoned that tow dipped in Peruvian balsam would not only disinfect a wound, but would keep it free from pus.

"This was the foundation of one of the most satisfactory successes be ever had in surgery. It was the means of introducing into the army the use of tarred hemp, or oakum, as a dressing
