EDITORIAL.

There is nothing small about the bill which report says the physician who attended McKinley will present for their services. The amount is stated to be one hundred thousand dollars.

France has tried the Turkey frying process in the Orient and the tough old fowl has acquiesced to the demands made upon her treasury by settling her obligations. The Porte of Turkey is charged with implication in the abduction of Miss Stone, in the hope of replenishing the treasury of that country, but if the powers do not soon stop making these persistent visits, triggered up in their war-paint, the "Sick Man" will have to engage in missionary stealing upon a large scale or else become bankrupt.

Elsewhere is an article, in this issue, taken from the Oregonian, which should be closely scrutinized by everybody, both male and female, old and young. It should be studied until the reader understands the principle involved, as a student does a principle conquered in mathematics, because it is of more importance to individuals collectively or otherwise. The subject under discussion is, "maximum pay for minimum work" and it is easily understood that under present conditions both employer and employee, intent to get the most either side can out of the other, inclines each to scheme and watch for advantages, and the minds of all engaged in this struggle are blinded, by so doing, to that keen sense of justice which leads to higher morality and greater possibilities. Two wrongs do not make right, and this condition is the legitimate result of competition. Under perfect social conditions the tendency upward will be as marked, as it is downward under the competitive system.

Jumped on a Ten Penny Nail.

The little daughter of J. N. Powell jumped on an inverted rake made of ten penny nails, and thrust one nail entirely through her foot and a second one half way through. Chamberlain's Pain Balm was promptly applied and five minutes later the pain had disappeared and no more suffering was experienced. In three days the child was wearing her shoes as usual and with absolutely no discomfort. Mr. Powell is a well known merchant of Forkland, Va. Pain Balm is antiseptic and heals such injuries without maturation and in one-third the time required by the usual treatment. For sale by C. Y. Lowe.

Capital Journal: Not a friendly feeling will pervade the Montana copper regions after the limiting program now being carried out has been completed, it is stated that the last closing down makes a total of 10,000 men engaged in mining or treating copper who lose work through this policy of the copper trust.

Telegram: The amount of the ransom demanded for Miss Stone's liberation, in gold, would weigh over 400 pounds. So, if it is paid, Miss Stone will be considered worth more than twice her weight in gold.

Telegram: "Count" Boni de Castel lane, while in a fit of rage, attacked and severely hurt a little pet dog. The incident would not have been so reprehensible if he had attacked a dog of his size.

Maximum Pay for Minimum Work.

Oregonian October 23, 1901.

W. Bramwell Booth, who, in accordance with the Salvation Army scheme for social elevation, employs or finds employment for thousands of poor men and women of London recently aroused the ire of trade unionists in England by declaring that, "labor leaders are instigating their followers to commit moral suicide." Mr. Booth's arraignment, which appeared in the London Times, contains this plain paragraph:

The principle actuating trades unionists—namely, to get the maximum pay for the minimum work—is breaking down the moral fiber of British working men and endangering the highest interests of the nation. Men who exercise care to give their employers only the amount of service absolutely necessary become highly specialized chests and utterly sacrifice moral and economic considerations.

Only the most obtuse moral sense can fail to recognize the principle of truth and honesty that underlies this statement. Those who strive systematically and arbitrarily to secure the maximum pay for the minimum work do so at the expense of their moral fiber. That is to say, their sensibilities become blunted, so far as honesty is concerned, by a process so closely allied to theft that it may well be held to its kinship therewith in summing up its influence upon the lives of men.

But what of the other side? What of employers who are intent upon getting more than value out of their workmen for the wages? Is this condition unknown to industrial life? Did it not, indeed, precede the practice so sharply and truly arraigned by Mr. Booth as a controlling force in the ranks of labor? If not, has it not at least kept pace with it all along the labor line, now put to rout temporarily by a strike, and again finding its opportunity through conditions affecting adversely the labor market? Clearly, the situation as embodied in the idea of the maximum wage for the minimum work is not one-sided. It is retroactive instead, retaliatory and present in its desire to get something for nothing—over reaching, undermining, scheming, to an ignominious end.

Two wrongs do not make one right, hence the rejoinder made by Edward Garrity, assistant secretary of the Amalgamated Society of Railway Servants of England, to Mr. Booth's arraignment of labor leaders is neither defense nor refutation. Mr. Garrity says:

Mr. Booth wants all the morality on one side. The employers long ago adopted the principle of getting everything possible out of their employees for the wages paid. Self-preservation has compelled us to retaliate in kind. We are perfectly willing to give reasonable service for a reasonable wage, but we insist that employers must show an equal willingness to give a reasonable wage for a reasonable service. Mr. Booth takes high ground and we would like to come up to his level, but we cannot since the employers require our presence on a lower level.

These excerpts, show indeed, a prevalence of what Mr. Booth calls "moral suicide" in the industrial ranks that is deplorable. When arraignment for dishonest dealing is met by confession with attempted palliation on the ground that, as the other side does, so do we, the charge of moral suicide as preferred by Mr. Booth against the army of British workingmen, who, through their leaders, scheme to secure the maximum pay for minimum work, may be considered proven. Serious as is the charge, the confession and the counter-charge set up as defense are not the less so. The term "specialized chests" is not to harsh to apply to the engineers of an industrial system whose processes are "breaking down the moral fiber" of those engaged, and "endangering the highest interests of the nations."

Kitchner Reports a Disaster to the British Near Bethel.

LONDON, Nov. 2.—Lord Kitchner has reported to the War Office a disaster to the British, near Bethel Eastern Transvaal, in which two guns were lost, nine officers were killed and 13 wounded and 54 men killed and 160 wounded. Following is the text of Lord Kitchner's dispatch dated Pretoria, October 31.

"I have just heard of a severe attack made on the rear guard of Colonel Benson's column when about 20 miles northwest of Bethel, near Broken Langte, during a thick mist. The strength of the enemy is reported to have been 1000. They rushed two guns with the rear guard, but it is uncertain whether they were able to remove them. I fear our casualties were heavy. Colonel Benson was wounded but not seriously. A relieving column will reach him this morning."

Later, Lord Kitchner telegraphed as follows: "Colonel Barton, who marched from the constabulary line yesterday, reached Benson's column early this morning (Friday) unopposed. He reports that Colonel Benson died of his wounds. The other casualties are as follows:

"Killed—Colonel Guinness, Major F. D. Murry, Captains M. W. Lindsay and F. F. Thorold, Lieutenants E. V. I. Brooks and R. E. Shepherd and Second Lieutenant A. J. Corlett. Died of his wound, Captain Eyre Lloyd."

Lord Kitchner then gives the names of 13 other officers who were wounded, most of them seriously, and then announces that 54 noncommissioned officers and men were killed and 160 wounded, adding that four of the latter have since died of their wounds. The dispatch then says:

"I assume that the two guns have been recovered and the enemy has withdrawn, but I have no further details. I deeply regret the loss of Colonel Benson and the other officers and men who fell with him. In Benson, the service loses a most gallant and capable officer, who invariably led his column with marked success and judgment. The fighting was at very close quarters, and maintained with determination by both sides. The enemy suffered heavily, but I have not yet received a reliable estimate. The Boers retired east."

Colonel Benson had been for some time operating in the vicinity of Bethel, which is northeast of Standerton. He surprised a Boer laager, October 22, near Trichards fountain, taking 37 prisoners. Three days later, according to Lord Kitchner's report at the time, after a long night march, the commandoes under Gribelaar and Erasmus heavily attacked Benson's rear guard and flanks at Yzirvarkfontein, but were easily driven away. Whether this was the attack which resulted so disastrously, or whether the Boers who had been repulsed took advantage of the mist to reattack is unexplained. Lord Kitchner does not give the date of Bethel engagement.

The Weekly Oregonian and this paper give you all the news of home, state, the Northwest and the nation.

The Commoner.

(Mr. Bryan's Paper.)

The Commoner has attained within six months from date of the first issue a circulation of 100,000 copies, a record probably never equaled in the history of American periodical literature. The unparalleled growth of this paper demonstrates that there is room in the newspaper field for a national paper devoted to the discussion of political, economic, and social problems.

The columns of The Commoner Mr. Bryan contribute his best efforts, and his review of political events as they arise from time to time can not fail to interest those who study public questions.

The Commoner's regular subscription price is $1.00 per year. We have arranged with Mr. Bryan whereby we can furnish his paper and the Recorder together for one year for $2.25. The regular subscription price of the two papers when subscribed for separately is $3.00.
