EDITORIAL

And now we are to have war on the trusts. That is Babcock will introduce and push a bill to lower the tariff. This is rather refreshing news especially, after these trusts have been fostered and fed until they have monopolized about all the profitable business of the country. Now there is talk of lowering the tariff as a means to make war upon them. The trusts can now control the business of the country tariff or no tariff, and trying to control them through lowering the rates is about as laudable as it would be to try to extinguish an active volcano with a hand pump.

A railroad trust has been incorporated with a capital stock of $400,000. J. Pierpont Morgan paid the filing fee with a check representing $80,000. This is another step toward socialism—railroad socialism. These interests have been combined to escape competition. The stockholders of this and other combines understand that in union there is strength, and they unite their efforts, being willing to share the profits, while they overcome competition and levy tribute on all persons who come under their commercial thumb. With the railroad systems under one management the tolls levied upon products to be transported is only limited by the cost of production.

The world moves on apace. Great business combinations, one after another, are ushered in upon the stage of action with a rapidity that astonishes the on-looker, while each successive combine is more stupendous in its proportions and operations than its predecessor, and mocks the effort of the finite mind to fathom the extent to which these colossal structures may reach. The world stands agape, watching the building of gigantic structures, not of profit only, but of distress also, which at no distant day will have completed the financial slavery of nine-tenths of the human race, with an apathy that cannot be accounted for except in this, that they do not understand the things that are taking place around them. They have eyes but they see not, and have ears but they do not understand. That eternal vigilance is the price of liberty, is true.

Benefits to Accrue.

Socialism assumes that the proper training and education of children are of more importance to the nation than to the parents. As citizens they will have a great influence for weal or woe of the nation for a longer number of years than they are children. The life of the nation depends on their character. The nation cannot afford to have children brought up under bad conditions. It costs more in the long run than to give each child every opportunity that it can or will make use of. When the nation projects each child in the fullest enjoyment of food, clothing, shelter, instruction and entertainment, regardless of the moral or lack of moral character of its parents, such children will love their country and its instruction with a devotion of a good child to good parents. Don't you think so? Wouldn't you? We are all very much alike. Competition assumes that the parents should care for the child and fight each other for the proper conditions to do it. If the child gets an education or anything else, all right; if it does not, well it's its own or parents' fault. Some children have more than they can use and others have less than they need. This is bad for both. And beyond this, Socialism assumes it is the duty of society to see that each child has a place in the national life in which it can exercise the abilities and genius that have been developed by the parent care and protection of the state of society. It should never have to lose time or expense in finding a place to apply its energy, for that is a loss both to it and to the nation. As Ruskin says: "A happy nation may be defined as one in which the husband's hand is on the plow and the housewife's on the needle, so in due time reaping its golden harvest and shining in golden vesture." And if any lose time in finding the plow or the needle how can they reap their harvest or shine in golden vesture? Take this thought with you and think over it five or ten thousand years and see if you cannot realize it.

Depression in Farming.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 12.—The Industrial Commission to-day made public its review of the evidence taken before the commission on the subjects of agriculture and agricultural labor. Among other subjects discussed is that of agricultural depression, of which the commission speaks as follows:

"The cause most often assigned for the depression of agriculture in the Eastern States is the increased production due to the opening of lands in advance of their natural demand, especially through the agency of liberal land laws and grants of land in aid of railroad construction. The competition of the West has been rendered especially severe by the policy of the railroads in making freight rates relatively low for long distances. The old staple products having thus become unprofitable in the East, it has been necessary for farmers to change their methods and vary the character of their crops, taking up especially the culture of products which are not easily transported long distances. Thus, truck farming has largely superseded cereal growing along the Atlantic Coast, but farmers in the North Atlantic States now complain of the severe competition of states further south in this industry, and much the same may be said of fruit-growing. Even so perishable a commodity as milk is transported much longer distances than formerly, since the introduction of refrigerator cars.

"Another cause which several witnesses assign for the unsatisfactory condition of agriculture in some parts of the country is the conservatism of the farmers, their lack of quick adjustment to changed conditions and lack of effective business planning. The farmers, as a class have not kept up with the times, but have raised the same crops year after year without regard to changes in supply and demand. This undue conservatism and lack of managing ability among farmers is especially emphasized with reference to the Southern States, and is given as an explanation of the too exclusive attention to cotton production prevailing there.

"Another cause assigned for agricultural depression in the South is the scarcity of money, the difficulty of borrowing on real estate security and the consequent high rates of interest. It seems possible, however, to borrow money in the South at somewhat lower rates of interest than formerly. The decline in the price of cotton is, of course, an important element in the depression of agriculture in the South. The inefficiency of negro labor is assigned as another cause. On the other hand, it is affirmed that there is too much good and cheap labor in the South. A surplus of cheap labor is said to be unfavorable to the success of agriculture, because it results in planting too large an acreage with neglect of personal attention by the planter. Against the charge that farmers are unduly conservative, is put the counter charge that they turn from one crop to another without sufficient regard to the suitability of the climate and soil, or to the conditions of the market."

Oregonian: The talk about international arbitration in the war in South Africa can come to nothing. It will not be regarded by Great Britain as a subject of international arbitration, any more than the United States so regarded the war with the Confederate States. Great Britain will not arbitrate; because, if she should, she would cease to be a nation among the nations of the earth.

Telegram: The editor of a New York commercial paper declares that the President, assured him that his forthcoming annual message would contain no recommendation for or allusion to a revision of the tariff, the omission being "in the interest of conservatism." But conservatism demands a revision of the monstrous tariff law. Those who stand for the continuance of the present tariff stuffing tariff schedules are the real radicals.

Ill Usage of the Eyes.

Most persons are right or left sighted. We all use one eye—the right or left—in preference, when looking through a glass or taking aim with a gun. If we do not perceive this ourselves, oculists and opticians remark it. The ignorance of most people on this subject is illustrated by their buying glasses at the opticians without taking account of any difference between the eyes. Thus only one of the eyes is helped, while the other one being less called into exercise, becomes less and less useful and loses its power, as a tool rusts when not in use. Yet both our eyes are needed to see well. It becomes, therefore, highly important to observe how the child uses its eyes in order to correct those attitudes which tend to injury of the sight, as well as the health. In writing, children rarely fail to give the head an inclination by which the eyes are placed at unequal distances from the paper. They are also apt to incline the head too far and acquire the habit of bringing it too near, as when they try to accommodate themselves to a feeble light. No sufficient attention is paid to these matters, especially when we consider the consequences of such habits in mature age. A large proportion of our defects originate in want of proper care during childhood. We do wrong to such wonderful tools as our senses, when we do not give them the education they need. It is surprising that parents who are so particular about the way their children hold their spoon or fork pay so little attention to the way they use their eyes.

Telegram: The statue of Maude Adams, which was on exhibition at the Buffalo Exposition, has been melted, and yielded 97,000 worth of gold. It is not known whether the original unmelted Maude Adams is worth that much or not, except to the young men who may be in love with her.

A LIBERAL OFFER.

The undersigned will give a free sample of Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets to any one wanting a reliable remedy for disorders of the stomach, biliousness or constipation. This is a new remedy and a good one.

C. Y. LOWE.

Jumped on a Ten Penny Nail.

The little daughter of J. N. Powell jumped on an inverted rack made of ten penny nails, and thrust one nail entirely through her foot and a second one half way through. Chamberlain's Pain Balm was promptly applied and five minutes later the pain had disappeared and no more suffering was experienced. In three days the child was wearing her shoe as usual and with absolutely no discomfort. Mr. Powell is a well known merchant of Forkland, Va. Pain Balm is antiseptic and heals such injuries without maturation and in one-third the time required by the usual treatment. For sale by C. Y. Lowe.

The Commoner.

(Mr. Bryan's Paper.)
The Commoner has attained within six months from date of the first issue a circulation of 100,000 copies, a record probably never equaled in the history of American periodicals. The singular rapid growth of this paper demonstrates that there is room in the newspaper field for a national paper devoted to the discussion of political, economic, and social problems. To the editors of The Commoner Mr. Bryan contributes his best efforts; and his review of public affairs as they arise from time to time can not fail to interest those who study public questions.
