Safe to raise Quarantine.
COQUILLE, OR, Feb. 17, 1902. DR. A. W. KIME:
Dear Sir: That you may know the correct condition here I write you. There are now five houses under quarantine, to wit: Dully's Matson's Woods' Dean's and McAdams'. Dully, Matson and Woods will be fumigated and turned loose during the week. Dean will be under quarantine for about ten days yet. These are all cases where others of the families have had the disease, and the last ones to have it are now convalescing. There has been no case, outside of families where others have had it, taken it for about three weeks, where it was inoculated in town.
McAdams' is a new family to have it, but they got it by going visiting his father's family out of town, and some of them had it and did not know it. The baby contracted it and not having been vaccinated it made a well developed case. So you see it was no fault of our quarantine that this case occurred.
So far as Coquille is concerned it is perfectly safe to raise your quarantine.
To give you these facts I have consulted city officers and Dr. Culin and have been particular to get the facts.
Respectfully, J. W. STRANGE.
For Stomach Troubles.
"I have taken a great many different medicines for stomach trouble and constipation," says Mrs. S. Geiger of Dunkerton, Iowa, "but never had as good results from any as from Chamberlain's Stomach & Liver Tablets." For Sale by C. Y. Lowe.

"Around the Pan."
The reader may make up his mind to be pleasantly overwhelmed by the opulence and vivacity of "Around the Pan," published by the Nutsell Publishing Company, 1059 Third Avenue, New York.
The wonders begin with the frontispiece picture of President McKinley, drawn in a single line beginning at a point on the cheek bone and going round and round in a constantly widening circle, with waverings and downbendings of the pen in the proper places to secure detachment and shading. We are told that this portrait "is considered the most unique work of its kind in the world," and if there are degrees of uniqueness we are willing to believe that this is most the thing of which there are no duplicates. Of course there is text in addition to the pictures, and we should be surprised indeed to hear from any purchaser the opinion that he had not got his money's worth (2.00).

Notice.
Please do not loaf in my place of business on busy days or nights. I know that it causes loss. The man on opposite side of street does not know that you do not wish work done or have had it done. Get what you want and do not tarry, and call in when I am idle and you will find a welcome.

Southern Oregon Reserves

The report of the examination of the "Cascade Range and Ashland Forest Reserves and Adjacent Regions," by Mr. J. B. Leiber, now in press, but not published, is a part of the Twenty-first Annual Report of the United States Geological Survey, and is edited by Mr. Henry Gannett, Geographer. The region discussed in this report is in southern Oregon. It contains nearly 8,000 square miles, 4,676,360 acres, comprising the central and upper areas of Rogue and Klamath river basins, and a small part of the water shed of the Upper South Umpqua river, and is divided into two nearly equal portions by the main range of the Cascades. The eastern and western slopes have many dissimilar characteristics, the country dropping down, on the west, in long spurs, to the valley of Rouge river, and on the east in steeper declivities to the Klamath Lakes and the great plains stretching eastward from them. The mean elevation is 6,000 feet. The character of the Cascade Range is volcanic; the cones and peaks being of different ages, and extinct craters abounding among them, the one containing the famous Crater Lake. The Ashland Forest Reserve consists of Siskiyou Peak, or Ashland Butte, nearly 3,000 feet above sea-level, and contains over 22,000 acres. The object of this reserve is to maintain the volume and purity of Ashland creek, the water supply of the town of Ashland. The Siskiyou Mountain range forms a connecting link between the Coast Range and the Cascades.
In this region the same general conditions prevail as in the Mount Rainier Reserve. The crest of the range forms a dividing line between widely differing sets of forest conditions. Upon the west, with an ample rainfall, the forests are fairly dense, and the undergrowth luxuriant. Upon the east, where more arid conditions prevail, the forests are open, with no underbrush. The species differ measurably on the two sides. Those on the west side consist largely, if not mainly, of red fir, while upon the east side the forest is largely of yellow pine. Of the area examined by Mr. Leiber 65 per cent is forested and 35 per cent not forested, the non-forested areas lying mainly in the extreme west and in the eastern part of the area examined. The amount of saw-mill timber found upon the forest area is estimated by him as a little less than 20,000 million feet, an average per acre of the forest land of 6,660 feet. Of the total stand of timber upon this area, yellow pine comprises 43 per cent; red fir 33 per cent; white fir 6 per cent; noble fir and sugar pine each 4 per cent; and the remainder is of other species. West of the Cascade Range, red fir is the dominant species, affording more than half of the total amount of timber, yellow pine being next with nearly one fourth of the total; and of the Cascades on the other hand, yellow pine constitutes six-sevenths of all the timber.
Fires have widely ravaged this region. Of the forested area examined, in round numbers 3,000,000 acres, or 99.99 per cent are fire marked; and that of this fire marked area 587,000 acres are badly burned. That is to say, within the last forty years, settlement clearings not included, 7,000 million feet, E. M., of merchantable mill timber has been destroyed by fire.
This paper is well illustrated by fourteen plates.
