Marshfield Sun: John J. Cozad willfully and maliciously wrecked the two large plate windows in the Flanagan & Bennett bank, Tuesday evening, and shortly after committing the crime was taken into custody by Marshal Carter. Cozad could give no motive for his rash act and has been ominously silent in the matter. The windows were among the largest and finest in town costing $250; they now present the appearance of having been used by a 13-inch gun for a target. He was given a hearing Wednesday before Judge Hyde charged with breaking in the glass of a building of another. On entering court Cozad stated that he did not want an attorney; he also made inquiry of Judge Hyde if he could be punished for the crime if he did the act while not in his right mind. Cozad plead guilty, and the case was continued until today at 10 a. m. for passing sentence, when he was given the extreme penalty of the law—a fine of $500 and costs and imprisonment in the county jail until it is paid, not to exceed 250 days. Cozad arrived here in the capacity of a sailor on the schooner Una a fortnight since from San Diego. Since his arrival he has been working with a section gang on the railroad. When arrested he had a small quantity of "booze" aboard and 10 cents on his person.

Mysterious Death of Gus Berg
The following account of the incidents surrounding the death of Gus Berg of Curry county, is from the Gold Beach News to the Port Orford Tribune of March 4th.
Last Tuesday, Gus Berg was found dead in his cabin on upper Pistol river. A justice was sent for and an inquest held. Dr. Cooper was called and upon examining the body it was found that death resulted from three shots fired from a gun or pistol. Two bullets had entered one side of the breast but did not pass through the body, and a third bullet had entered one arm. After examining the wounds Dr. Cooper gave it as his opinion that the man may have lived 24 hours after receiving the shots. An examination of the premises revealed the fact that two or three shots had been fired through the wall and roof, from the inside of the house. There was blood on the floor and also on the gun, which was standing in the corner of the room. The body was lying in the bed and both shirts had been removed. Sour dough had been plastered over the wounds. The door was partly open and through the opening a stick protruded, and on the stick a vest was hanging, as if to attract attention. Suicide was the verdict of the jury they believing that the man afterwards concluding that he didn't want to die. The body was buried without the bullets being removed.
Mr. Berg was a German about 38 years of age, and highly educated. He was a prospector, and spent most of his time in the mountains. He was a little "queer," and when last seen had talked and acted in a strange manner.
Last Monday, before Berg's dead body was found, Joe Stewart, who resides with his wife and seven children on upper Pistol river, left home to go to a cabin on a claim he owned further up the river two miles from Berg's. He took with him his horse, gun and a large revolver. He told his wife he would return Wednesday evening. He had not returned Thursday so his brother and others went to the cabin, where they found the gun, saddle and horse, but no trace of Stewart. They also found that a frying pan and three or four days provisions were missing. Search was commenced and a track was found like Stewart's. He was tracked the first day for several miles. More men have joined the party and are following his track, which leads into the mountains.
Why Mr. Stewart should leave his family and take to the mountains is a mystery. Mr Stewart has resided in this county for many years and has always been a hardworking, honorable, man and good neighbor.
Sheriff Walker has gone to lend his aid to fathom the mystery.
One theory is that Stewart called on Berg; that Berg attacked him, and that Stewart shot him in self defense, and becoming frightened took to the woods. It would seem from appearances, however, that Berg met his death several days before Stewart disappeared.
News comes up from Curry to the effect that Mr. Stewart had no revolver. His trail was lost in the neighborhood of Snow Camp, and nothing more is known in the matter.

CARRIED OVER THE BRINK.—Frank G. Wayne is dead. Death seems to have been the result of poison imbibed to satiate his thirst for alcohol. He is supposed to have taken Native Oil, a strong medicine, or else wood alcohol, from the effect of which death resulted after an awful siege of suffering. He died at Dairyville last Monday and was interred next day. Frank was well advanced in years, intelligent, had a genial nature, was a pleasant companion, at his best, and if he had been master of himself, and his energies bent in the upward tendency, could have made a success of himself and of life, but alcohol was his master and his ruin. He was given respectable attendance and buried by the citizens of Dairyville.

Telegram: When ex Governor Hogg, of Texas, now an oil millionaire, who is in London, was informed that in order to attend a royal reception and be permitted to shake hands with King Edward, he would have to wear knee breeches with buckles and a lot of other court regalia, he promptly declined to go, saying that if the King could not receive him in ordinary evening dress such as is worn by American gentlemen on the best of occasions, he would not attend the reception. Hurrah for Hogg! He is an American yet, if he did make some millions out of oil.
