Bandon Won the Victory.

Marshfield Put a Gilledge Game But Bandon Was There to Win.

The day dawned clear and bright Sunday morning, and as the golden sphere rose above the Eastern mountains you could plainly see, written in big letters against the blue ether, "Victory for the Bee Ponies."

About 10:30 the steamers, loaded to their full capacity with living freight, began to arrive. Immediately the hotel was the center of attraction, and after the hungry were fed, the procession started for the ball grounds. The red white and blue, and the orange and black streamers floated conspicuously in the line of marchers.

Arrived on the ground the game was soon on, and at the end of the first inning the Marshfielders had much the best of the game but the Bandon team gradually piled up the runs until the score stood nine to six in favor of Bandon.

Wright pitched a good game but seemed to loose confidenc and his winning smile deserted him when Terry McKune, the nonpareil short stop and slugger went to the bat.

Hanrahan seemed a favorite with the grand stand, the fair sex commenting favorably on his whipbenders.

The features of the game was the fine field work of Walker of Bandon and Sneddon of Marshfield.

Page was there with his batting eye and his two two baggers came in the proper time.

Blackerby played a fine game being the only one who worked Wright for a free passage to first base, and Corry Hunt made many admirers.

Tommy Barrows, who served at the end of Hanrahan's whip caught an errorless game, and John Snyder gave the best of support at the receiving end of the Marshfield battery.

The Star, which illumines the first base for the tri colors, is a jewel of the first quality and will display some brilliant stick work in the future.

Ferry, Marshfield's first baseman had medals on him, and Girard, the second baseman, is all right.
