EDITORIAL

President Roosevelt killed a bear a few days ago but it was not one of the kind which infest Wall street.

From various sources comes the information that old line Democrats are rejoicing in the hope that if the party can eliminate Bryanism from it, the chances will be correspondingly bright for success in the next national campaign.

Now it is the Beef Trust that is going to save thousands of dollars by letting out many of the smaller houses but it is not likely that beef will be any cheaper to the consumer.

Coast Mail: Nelson Bennet, one of the biggest railroad contractors in the West and the man who built Stampede Tunnel on the Northern Pacific is in town.

Appeal to Reason: Questioned as to why she became a Socialist, Annie Besant, the famous novelist, said: "The cry of starving children, the sobs of women poisoned in the lead works, driven to prostitution by starvation, made old and haggard by ceaseless work, the result of an evil system inseparable from private ownership of the instruments of wealth production, has made me a Socialist."

John W. Gregg Dead.

John Gregg, who lived at or near the Randolph blacksand mines was found dead in his bed last Sunday morning.

James A. Morrison, who slept at Gregg's cabin, but who boarded at the mines, arose and went to his breakfast, but on returning about 8 o'clock, thought that Mr. Gregg was oversleeping and called to him; receiving no answer he stepped into his room and upon laying his hand upon him discovered that he was dead.

Beware of Ointments for Catarrh that Contains Mercury as mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surfaces.

Where the Money Is.

Secretary Shaw, in a recent speech, made a significant statement, one that deserves more attention than it has received. He was arguing against any revision of the tariff, on the ground that such action would disturb business interests, and he went on to say that the farmers were never so prosperous. They are out of debt and have money. Asked where it was, they say, "In the local banks."

"You will find that both deposits and loans have been enormous. The money is not in the banks. There are only six national banks in New York that have not been below their legal reserves since January 1. You want to know where the money is? Well, $450,000,000 is loaned by national banks on the bonds of industrial corporations. These corporations issued bonds instead of stocks because the national banks can take the former and can't take the latter. Intrinsically they are no better than stocks. In most of them there has been a lot of water-curing. Here you see where $450,000,000 of the country's surplus stands against a lot of undigested, propped-up securities. The trust companies have put out millions more in the same way. That is where we stand. It is all right as long as it is all right. But I don't want to see anything happen. I don't want to see these industrial begin to topple over, to fall against one another and come down in a heap like children's play-blocks."

These corporations are using about half a billion, about a quarter of the country's money, and if the security isn't bad now, it may become so any day. And lest "something should happen," lost these "industrials" should "topple over," one upon another, in a common ruin, this great statesman says: "Don't touch the tariff; it's dangerous; let the people be plundered out of a few hundred million a year by these 'industrial' sharks; it is necessary to keep up the profits on bonds issued in lieu of inflated stocks; eh, don't go to tinkering at the tariff; it would be dangerous."

One can almost overlook the type of statesmanship exhibited by the Secretary in consideration of the light shed upon the situation of his statement.—Portland Telegram.

Can Burn Soft Coal.

"There is no danger of the people freezing to death," said E. H. Ashley, secretary of the Pitman & Dean Co. "They can burn soft coal."

A sovereign of France could see no reason why the people should starve. He said: Let the people eat grass. Now, the people could possibly live on "greens" for a time, and they can burn soft coal instead of anthracite. But that isn't the question at issue. The question is, has any man or combination of men any natural right to grab all the fuel of a certain kind put into the ground by the Almighty for all His children, and not content with an ordinary profit of 400 per cent, take advantage of necessity to rob a nation?

No one doubts the coal barons have a legal right, under our present system, to do this thing. And evidently these men believe they have a natural right, a divine right.

There is President Baer, of the Philadelphia & Reading road who indicates the impious sentiment that "God, in His infinite wisdom, has given the control of the property interests of the country" into hands like his.

To say nothing of the blasphemy of such a claim, the doctrine is a revival of the divine right of kings and overseers, a doctrine our forefathers shot to death, as they thought over a hundred years ago.

True, the people can burn soft coal. They can throw away the base burners designed for anthracite, and buy others. They can change their furnaces at large expense.

But the people of France soon got tired of eating grass, and the people of this country are getting tired of being told what coal they must use, or submit to be robbed.

The coal barons are simply hastening the day when the people—the government—shall own and operate the mines.—Kansas World.

Couldn't Stop Their Biting.

By Rev. Louis Albert Banks, D. D. A young backwoodsman who guided me on a trout fishing excursion last summer was pointing out a certain lake where he said that the winter before he had gone fishing for pickerel through the ice, and while he was catching the pickerel, suddenly the large lake trout began to bite, and in a few minutes he caught twenty-five pounds of them.

I quietly remarked, "Is it not against the law to catch trout through the ice?"

He looked at me whimsically, and said, "O, yes; but then, I couldn't stop their biting."

I think there are a good many young people who excuse themselves for their sins in much the same way. They put themselves into positions where they are tempted to indulge in questionable things, and then say, "O, well, I couldn't have done differently, situated as I was." A man goes with drinking company, knowing that he will be tempted to strong drink, and then excuses himself for taking wine because of the circumstances in which he is placed. You cannot help temptation's coming when you put yourself in the way of it, but you can keep away from the place where you have every reason to know that you will be tempted.

Child Against the Mother.

"God save us from many scenes like that," murmured an old man with tears in his eyes. He was sitting as a spectator in the Court of General Sessions where Lizzie Madans was on trial for her life.

The woman sat by her lawyer, white faced and worn. She held in arms a tiny babe, born to her since she picked up a knife at the family table and sent its father suddenly out of the world.

"Call the children," said Recorder Goff in a quiet tone. Every man ceased his motion; hardly a breath stirred the torrid air as two girls, one of nine and one of eleven, were brought into the room. The youngest was seated and the other led up to the bench. The Recorder took her hand in his and in a low and gentle voice talked with her as to the nature of an oath. Satisfied with her replies he said, "She may be sworn."

Then in an artless manner, but with apparent truth in each word, she told of the tragedy of a humble and unhappy home.

The mother drank too much whiskey and the father scolded her for it. They were at the breakfast table and he was pouring out a glass of beer for her, when she seized a knife and struck him. "He did not raise his hand to my mamma. He did nothing to her," said the child. "She struck him and she struck him pretty hard. He fell into a chair with a scream and then mother dropped the knife and also screamed."

During this pitiful story from the lips of an unhappy child the mother sat staring at the girl, without motion of body or lips.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Telegram: The beef trust announces that under the reorganization plan it will save hundreds of thousands of dollars by abolishing branch houses. Very likely; but consumers will get no part of that money through cheaper beef.

A YOUNG LADY'S LIFE SAVED.

At Panama, Colombia, by Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. Dr. Chas. H. Utter, a prominent Physician, of Panama, Colombia, in a recent letter states: "Last March I had as a patient a young lady sixteen years of age, who had a very bad attack of dysentery. Everything I prescribed for her proved ineffectual and she was growing worse every hour. Her parents were sure she would die. She had become so weak that she could not turn over in bed. What to do at this critical moment was a study for me, but I thought of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy and as a last resort prescribed it. The most wonderful result was effected. Within eight hours she was feeling much better; inside of three days she was upon her feet and at the end of one week was entirely well." For sale by C. Y. Lowe.
