

the public will not always suffer to itons.

them.

and the deep sea" very aptly describes the condition into which the coal operators are getting themselves in their stubbornness to recognize the Miners' Union and to yield the difference between themselves and the siriking miners to arbitration. Public opinion is rapidly rising and respect for the position the operators contend for is correspondingly receding so that the operators now stand between the strikers and the flooding wave of public sentiment which threatens to completely engulf them. Another swell or two of the incoming tide and President Baer will begin to doubt as to whether or not it was by the divine will of God that he and his class came into posession of the coal fields. It is best for the arm of flesh not to presume on divine authority .- The claim may be ignored.

Marshfield Mob Aftermath.

"Further information concerning the lynching of the negro tucker at Marshfield recently, serves to emphasize the fact that many people are anxious to see others punished for may be guilty of similar or even worse with that disgraceful affair are well known in this vicinity and bear most upenviable reputations. The woman in the case, Mrs. Dennis so called, is said to be a former resident of Acme. who having become infatuated with another man, last winter deserted a respectable husband and son, and taking their three younger children. went to Marsbfield to join her para-

