

Volume XIX.

BANDON, OREGON: THURSDAY, JUNE 11, 1903

Number 24.

LOCAL NEWS.

Wool socks for sale at Sanderson Bros. A. E. Kent, of Roseburg was in town last Monday.

"Photo" Buttons, 10 to 15c, at Wrenshall's Gallery. W. B. Webster and C. E. Putnam, of Pasadena, Calif., were in town this week.

T. B. Perkins, from Hillsboro, Oregon, registered at the Tupper House last Monday.

M. E. Gibson, of Dairyville, was in town a day or two this week, having business that called him here.

Call on Sanderson Bros. for the Famous De Laval Separator. We carry them in stock.

A number of Bandonians visited Marshfield Saturday evening, returning home Sunday night.

If you wish something delicate and delicious try a package of Cream of Wheat at T. Anderson's.

Elder Holt will preach, in Recorder Hall, Saturday evening and again at 8 o'clock Sunday evening.

The new town board qualified last Monday and took charge of the town's interest. Carl Nelson was appointed marshal.

Mrs. Robert Barton, of Moscow, Idaho, and Mrs. H. S. Harris of Spokane, Wash., registered in Bandon, Monday.

F. E. Hicks, the photographer who has been staying here all winter left Wednesday on a trip down into Curry county.

M. L. Martin, Expert Piano tuner Orders by postal will receive prompt attention. Permanent address Marshfield, Oregon.

Following is the passenger list on the Ohio when she sailed last Friday: B C Rucker, C M Bunch, C F Allen, J M Bethell, and Captain Ellingson.

You will find the best brands of flour, bacon, ham and lard and other kinds of provisions and groceries of guaranteed strength at H. A. Cox's grocery.

J. Waldvogel and son arrived here, last Friday, from Tillamook. Mr. Waldvogel is L. N. Barnes' partner in the butcher business and came to reside here.

Dont forget that Dr. Prentiss will be in Bandon from June 4th to 26th. As this will be his last trip, it will be well for you to have your dental work done at this time.

Sheriff Stephen Gallier has gone to Cherokee Nation to bring M. D. Landis, back to Coos county. He is probably ready to start on his return by this time.

Dr. Prentiss, the Marshfield dentist, is in Bandon and will remain until June 26. Persons requiring his services should call at once. Office with Dr. Kim.

J. W. Field sold his lot and blacksmith shop to William Gallier, his stock of material to Peter Nelson, packed up his tools and is gone elsewhere to seek a location.

F. Thompson was in town, last Monday, from the Star Ranch, having come in on business. Mr. Thompson made a very nice pick-up on a hog which he disposed of to Barnes & Company. The hog brought him $25.50. Does it pay to raise swine in this country?

M. I. Swift Dead.

DIED.—At Bandon, June 10, 1903 M. I. Swift, aged about 60 years.

Mr. Swift had been doing his chores around the house, and had put a bull upon one of his cows and turned them out as usual. On returning to the house he spoke to his wife who helped him to the lounge where he died immediately.

Mr. Swift served in the infantry from Iowa over four years during the Rebellion, and was in "Sherman's March to the Sea."

Deceased was buried at half past two o'clock, today, in the Bandon cemetery, under the auspices of the G. A. B. Post of this place. He leaves a wife, three daughters and two sons to mourn their bereavement.

Elder Holt will preach the funeral service of Mr. Swift, at 11 o'clock, Sunday, June 14, in Recorder Hall.

Hardware.

William Gallier has settled in Bandon again and has opened up a general Hardware business. He carries pans, tinware, buckets, dishes, tools, farm implements and a variety of other things.

Sportsmen whether hunters or fishermen will be able to obtain supplies from him, and he asks a share of public patronage and desires the public to call and see his wares and get prices.

Balston Health foods at Denholm's Hay, grain and feed at N. Lorenz's Store.

The finest layout of Candies in town, at J. B. Marshall & Son.

The steamer Mandalay is due to arrive here by Saturday evening.

New Matting and a full line of new wall paper at the Furniture store.

Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Mather, of Gold Beach passed through Bandon this week.

FOR SALE.—A good horse, cart and harness, cheap. Enquire at Sanderson Bros.

M. R. Lee gave Marshfield and Myrtle Point a visit this week, returning home yesterday.

Why pay fancy prices and wait a month for your suit. Denholm can save you money and fit you at once.

Ice Cream each Saturday and Sunday, at the Pacific Ice Cream Parlor and Confectionery, until further notice.

C. Gebrig wishes to say to the public that he has purchased the Bandon Brewery, and is now ready to supply the market with his product, and he asks a fair share of public patronage of Coos and adjoining counties. See his adv. in another column.

Baseball.

The Marshfielders were not in the Game—Too Slow.

The Bandon Baseball Team accompanied by Jack Hume and his bunch of lusty lunged rooters, journeyed to Marshfield last Sunday to meet the team of that town.

As each team had defeated North Bend and Coquille in turn, and were consequently tied for first place in Coos county League race, a warm game was anticipated.

Somehow or other the "bay leaguers" could not connect with "our only spider" when his meant runs while the Bandonians boomed their hits and were aided somewhat by the loss playing back of Wright.

A large crowd was in attendance out the Marshfield rooters never had a chance to show what they were capable of doing, except the little "kidding" handed our boys during their practice. This was soon quieted however when the Flying Dutchman made some of his phenomenal stops.

For the Marshfielders Lob, Boynton, Nadler and Jacobs did good work in the field and with the stick. Iberg, although he missed a couple of hard chances, played a good game and got two corking drives off the "Spider's" puzzling delivery.

The Bandon team all played good ball and Captain Streib's home run on the right field fence was a dandy. Baum also hit a long drive but was unfortunate in not touching the second base or he would also have been credited with a homer. Schofield played right field and hit like a "Turk." Some of his running catches would have done credit to "big leaguers."

Below we give the tabulated score of the game.

Score table with columns for Bandon and Marshfield, listing runs, hits, errors, and other statistics.

Home Run, Streib; 2 base hit, McKone, C. Owell Baum. Struck out by Baum 5, by Wright 5. Hit by pitch ball C. Owell 5, Adams, Short, Wright. Double play, Boynton to Nadler, Lob to Boynton to Nadler. Time of game 2 hours. Umpires, McAllister, Harper. Scorer Edmonds.

The game at North Bend between the team of that place and Coquille resulted in a victory for the home team in a score of 10 to 4 runs. Thomas Barrows, the Coquille catcher received severe injury to one of his arms retiring him from the game.

The standing of the league teams. Bandon, 1000; Coquille, 000; Marshfield, 666; North Bend, 333.

Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy is everywhere recognized as the one remedy that can always be depended upon and that is pleasant to take. It is especially valuable for summer diarrhoea in children and is undoubtedly the means of saving the lives of a great many children each year. For sale by C. Y. Lowe.

With every $25 of goods purchased at N. Lorenz' store you get a splendid portrait.

H. A. Cox has received another big supply of fine candies. If you buy of him once you will be sure to go again.

J. W. Strange who is operating in Curry county was in town Friday on his way to attend the A. O. U. W. Reunion at Coquille.

Mass Meeting.

The citizens of Bandon are requested to meet at the Town Hall Friday evening, June 12 to make further arrangements for celebrating July 4. Everybody Come.

The A. O. U. W. Excursion.

The members generally, of the A. O. U. W. order, in Coos County, assembled in re-union at Coquille, last Saturday, in accordance with the program that had been given to the public.

A delegation of about ninety persons, consisting of members of the Workmen and Degree of Honor, including invited guest, and attended by the Fire Department Band, left at seven in the morning, and proceeded by steamer to Coquille.

The trip up was very pleasant as the morning was delightful, and the Coquille valley always furnishes changes of picturesque scenery sufficient to break the monotony of the journey. Arrived at Prosper everything was business and bustle. The large mill there was in full operation, and the schooner Ruby just completing her load, preparatory to sailing for San Pedro.

Just above Prosper the new mill of the Southern Oregon Company was passed. The building is beginning to take on considerable proportions, the framework of the first and second stories being up, and a small wharf constructed on which rested four large boilers designed to furnish steam to operate the machinery of the mill.

Old Randolph showed up in the distance, as the excursion passed, but had its usual quiet appearance, except that the new steamer, Paater & Co is having constructed, showed up in the distance, but was too far off for inspection. Below Parkersburg we passed the place where Perkins, Moomaw and White are having their vessel built. It will soon be ready to slide into the river and to receive the machinery. At Parkersburg the sawmill was at work turning out lumber and the schooner Advance was taking on a cargo. The rock quarry, River-ton and other places of interest were passed and then came Coquille at which place the excursion was met by the Crescent band and member of the Workmen and Degree of Honor, and the number was soon swelled by the arrival of the Marshfield delegation.

After preliminary arrangements the march to the picnic grounds commenced, but from some cause or other was left to be continued, and the column stopped and stood for some time in the blistering heat and then dissolved.

The grounds were nicely located, near the railroad depot, where ample arrangements were made to spread the contents of the lunch baskets and feed those attending. The exercises took place in the forenoon. Rev. Haberly being the speaker, while music by the bands and other exercises filled out the time till noon.

In the afternoon there was a game of baseball between a Bandon and a Myrtle Point team, Myrtle Point winning in a score of 3 to 2 runs. A Coquille team then played the winners, but the day was too hot to enjoy baseball much less, to play it. Dale Barrows and Henry Averill, of Bandon were in the ball game and each were prostrated by the excessive heat.

It was after five o'clock in the evening before the start was made to return, and it was nearly sundown before the heat let up sufficiently to give comfort to the excursionists.

The mercury registered 102 to 108 in the shade, at Coquille, we were informed, and Front Street in the blazing sunshine was equal to at least 10 to 20 degree above that, so that the excessive heat marred what would otherwise have proved a pleasant occasion. There was less desire to be entertained than to be comfortable.

The next gathering of the A. O. U. W. is to take place at Bandon.

The grounds were nicely located, near the railroad depot, where ample arrangements were made to spread the contents of the lunch baskets and feed those attending. The exercises took place in the forenoon. Rev. Haberly being the speaker, while music by the bands and other exercises filled out the time till noon.

In the afternoon there was a game of baseball between a Bandon and a Myrtle Point team, Myrtle Point winning in a score of 3 to 2 runs. A Coquille team then played the winners, but the day was too hot to enjoy baseball much less, to play it. Dale Barrows and Henry Averill, of Bandon were in the ball game and each were prostrated by the excessive heat.

It was after five o'clock in the evening before the start was made to return, and it was nearly sundown before the heat let up sufficiently to give comfort to the excursionists.

The mercury registered 102 to 108 in the shade, at Coquille, we were informed, and Front Street in the blazing sunshine was equal to at least 10 to 20 degree above that, so that the excessive heat marred what would otherwise have proved a pleasant occasion. There was less desire to be entertained than to be comfortable.

The next gathering of the A. O. U. W. is to take place at Bandon.

The grounds were nicely located, near the railroad depot, where ample arrangements were made to spread the contents of the lunch baskets and feed those attending. The exercises took place in the forenoon. Rev. Haberly being the speaker, while music by the bands and other exercises filled out the time till noon.

In the afternoon there was a game of baseball between a Bandon and a Myrtle Point team, Myrtle Point winning in a score of 3 to 2 runs. A Coquille team then played the winners, but the day was too hot to enjoy baseball much less, to play it. Dale Barrows and Henry Averill, of Bandon were in the ball game and each were prostrated by the excessive heat.

It was after five o'clock in the evening before the start was made to return, and it was nearly sundown before the heat let up sufficiently to give comfort to the excursionists.

The mercury registered 102 to 108 in the shade, at Coquille, we were informed, and Front Street in the blazing sunshine was equal to at least 10 to 20 degree above that, so that the excessive heat marred what would otherwise have proved a pleasant occasion. There was less desire to be entertained than to be comfortable.

The next gathering of the A. O. U. W. is to take place at Bandon.

The grounds were nicely located, near the railroad depot, where ample arrangements were made to spread the contents of the lunch baskets and feed those attending. The exercises took place in the forenoon. Rev. Haberly being the speaker, while music by the bands and other exercises filled out the time till noon.

In the afternoon there was a game of baseball between a Bandon and a Myrtle Point team, Myrtle Point winning in a score of 3 to 2 runs. A Coquille team then played the winners, but the day was too hot to enjoy baseball much less, to play it. Dale Barrows and Henry Averill, of Bandon were in the ball game and each were prostrated by the excessive heat.

It was after five o'clock in the evening before the start was made to return, and it was nearly sundown before the heat let up sufficiently to give comfort to the excursionists.

The mercury registered 102 to 108 in the shade, at Coquille, we were informed, and Front Street in the blazing sunshine was equal to at least 10 to 20 degree above that, so that the excessive heat marred what would otherwise have proved a pleasant occasion. There was less desire to be entertained than to be comfortable.

The next gathering of the A. O. U. W. is to take place at Bandon.

Worth Seeing.

James Keane the Renowned Actor Coming.

James Keane, one of the leading actors on the stage today, will be in town tonight, accompanied by his entire troupe. This is most likely, the best troupe that has visited Coos county yet, and the visit here will give our citizens a chance to witness players that have merit as leaders in the theatrical profession.

Mr. Keane is not altogether a stranger to the people of this county, and among his friends and acquaintances is Mr. James Flanagan, of Flanagan & Bennett bank, Marshfield, who speaks of Mr. Keane as worthy the respect and confidence of the public.

Below is an extract copied from the San Francisco Dramatic Review which will be of interest.

James Keane is well and favorably known in Eastern circles as an actor of rare skill and discretion. Until recently he has been absent from the Pacific Coast for ten years. For some weeks he has been enjoying a much needed rest. During his last engagement in Boston with the famous Castle Square Stock Company he appeared in one hundred and thirty-one different roles, ranging from low comedy to tragedy. This in itself is quite a record; but, Mr. Keane is blessed with remarkable study and appears none the worse for wear. Scarcely out of his twenties, he can yet count many years to come in the juvenile line of work. Although by nature well suited to the dramatic juvenile branch of the profession, Mr. Keane expresses a great fondness for the heavier character roles. He has had ample opportunity to decide on the line of business for which he is best adapted, as the following list of his many engagements will show. His first appearance was made with Chas. Frohman's Empire Theatre Stock Company in the Masqueraders. His spirit, however yearned for a greater, deeper field than the society drama afforded. He became associated with James O'Neill of Monte Cristo fame. A thorough schooling in the classic and romantic drama under this able veteran, brought its results and a New York debut. Although receiving liberal encouragement from the press, Mr. Keane realized that he was far too immature for the heavy roles he was essaying. Horatio in Hamlet and Fernando in Monte Cristo, being rather heavy material for a far older man. A chance soon presented itself however. The illness of the leading man gave Kathryn Kidder an opportunity of witnessing Mr. Keane's performance of Laertes in Hamlet and Albert in Monte Cristo. Miss Kidder immediately engaged Mr. Keane to play the leading role of de Neipperg in her production of Madam Sans Gene. This part originated by Jas. K. Hackett, and, that did so much for him, materially assisted Mr. Keane. At the close of the engagement, he accepted an offer to star in conjunction with Julia Stewart, touring the Middle States in Leab, Romeo and Juliet, The Doll's House, Lady of Lyons, and Camilla. Financial difficulties between managers finally succeeded in closing the tour, and Mr. Keane made a venture into the stock companies. His first was with James Neill in Cincinnati, then followed seasons with the Giffen of Manhattan Beach, Denver, the Standard, Philadelphia, Meffert Stock of Louisville, Ky., and the Castle Square, Boston, Mass. During these years of stock, six several times broke away for production engagements in New York City. Again in October, 1900, when he originated one of the leading roles in Henrietta Crossman's ladder to fame. Mistress Nell. Six weeks later he resigned on Wednesday evening from Miss Crossman's company to open the next night across the street at Wallack's as Cecil Bryant, the leading role in Lumber & Co's production of the Greatest thing in the World, Sarah Cowell Le Moyne being the star. After the close of the New York engagement to the Castle Square Stock Company, Boston, where he has remained since. When asked in what part he considered he did his best work, Mr. Keane replied without hesitation, as Fierre, the straggler, in Eric Claxton's revival production of The Two Orphans at Park Theatre, Brooklyn, N. Y. Mr. Keane is completing arrangements to play a summer season in a circle of northern towns in order to break in his repertoire for the coming season on the Pacific Coast, desiring to establish a traveling stock company. A well known actress will be associated with him in this venture. His piece de resistance will be a play from the French by Dr. Daniel Cullaghan, author of The Legion of Honor, A Scrap of Paper, The Two Sisters, etc.

Below is an extract copied from the San Francisco Dramatic Review which will be of interest.

James Keane is well and favorably known in Eastern circles as an actor of rare skill and discretion. Until recently he has been absent from the Pacific Coast for ten years. For some weeks he has been enjoying a much needed rest. During his last engagement in Boston with the famous Castle Square Stock Company he appeared in one hundred and thirty-one different roles, ranging from low comedy to tragedy. This in itself is quite a record; but, Mr. Keane is blessed with remarkable study and appears none the worse for wear. Scarcely out of his twenties, he can yet count many years to come in the juvenile line of work. Although by nature well suited to the dramatic juvenile branch of the profession, Mr. Keane expresses a great fondness for the heavier character roles. He has had ample opportunity to decide on the line of business for which he is best adapted, as the following list of his many engagements will show. His first appearance was made with Chas. Frohman's Empire Theatre Stock Company in the Masqueraders. His spirit, however yearned for a greater, deeper field than the society drama afforded. He became associated with James O'Neill of Monte Cristo fame. A thorough schooling in the classic and romantic drama under this able veteran, brought its results and a New York debut. Although receiving liberal encouragement from the press, Mr. Keane realized that he was far too immature for the heavy roles he was essaying. Horatio in Hamlet and Fernando in Monte Cristo, being rather heavy material for a far older man. A chance soon presented itself however. The illness of the leading man gave Kathryn Kidder an opportunity of witnessing Mr. Keane's performance of Laertes in Hamlet and Albert in Monte Cristo. Miss Kidder immediately engaged Mr. Keane to play the leading role of de Neipperg in her production of Madam Sans Gene. This part originated by Jas. K. Hackett, and, that did so much for him, materially assisted Mr. Keane. At the close of the engagement, he accepted an offer to star in conjunction with Julia Stewart, touring the Middle States in Leab, Romeo and Juliet, The Doll's House, Lady of Lyons, and Camilla. Financial difficulties between managers finally succeeded in closing the tour, and Mr. Keane made a venture into the stock companies. His first was with James Neill in Cincinnati, then followed seasons with the Giffen of Manhattan Beach, Denver, the Standard, Philadelphia, Meffert Stock of Louisville, Ky., and the Castle Square, Boston, Mass. During these years of stock, six several times broke away for production engagements in New York City. Again in October, 1900, when he originated one of the leading roles in Henrietta Crossman's ladder to fame. Mistress Nell. Six weeks later he resigned on Wednesday evening from Miss Crossman's company to open the next night across the street at Wallack's as Cecil Bryant, the leading role in Lumber & Co's production of the Greatest thing in the World, Sarah Cowell Le Moyne being the star. After the close of the New York engagement to the Castle Square Stock Company, Boston, where he has remained since. When asked in what part he considered he did his best work, Mr. Keane replied without hesitation, as Fierre, the straggler, in Eric Claxton's revival production of The Two Orphans at Park Theatre, Brooklyn, N. Y. Mr. Keane is completing arrangements to play a summer season in a circle of northern towns in order to break in his repertoire for the coming season on the Pacific Coast, desiring to establish a traveling stock company. A well known actress will be associated with him in this venture. His piece de resistance will be a play from the French by Dr. Daniel Cullaghan, author of The Legion of Honor, A Scrap of Paper, The Two Sisters, etc.

Below is an extract copied from the San Francisco Dramatic Review which will be of interest.

James Keane is well and favorably known in Eastern circles as an actor of rare skill and discretion. Until recently he has been absent from the Pacific Coast for ten years. For some weeks he has been enjoying a much needed rest. During his last engagement in Boston with the famous Castle Square Stock Company he appeared in one hundred and thirty-one different roles, ranging from low comedy to tragedy. This in itself is quite a record; but, Mr. Keane is blessed with remarkable study and appears none the worse for wear. Scarcely out of his twenties, he can yet count many years to come in the juvenile line of work. Although by nature well suited to the dramatic juvenile branch of the profession, Mr. Keane expresses a great fondness for the heavier character roles. He has had ample opportunity to decide on the line of business for which he is best adapted, as the following list of his many engagements will show. His first appearance was made with Chas. Frohman's Empire Theatre Stock Company in the Masqueraders. His spirit, however yearned for a greater, deeper field than the society drama afforded. He became associated with James O'Neill of Monte Cristo fame. A thorough schooling in the classic and romantic drama under this able veteran, brought its results and a New York debut. Although receiving liberal encouragement from the press, Mr. Keane realized that he was far too immature for the heavy roles he was essaying. Horatio in Hamlet and Fernando in Monte Cristo, being rather heavy material for a far older man. A chance soon presented itself however. The illness of the leading man gave Kathryn Kidder an opportunity of witnessing Mr. Keane's performance of Laertes in Hamlet and Albert in Monte Cristo. Miss Kidder immediately engaged Mr. Keane to play the leading role of de Neipperg in her production of Madam Sans Gene. This part originated by Jas. K. Hackett, and, that did so much for him, materially assisted Mr. Keane. At the close of the engagement, he accepted an offer to star in conjunction with Julia Stewart, touring the Middle States in Leab, Romeo and Juliet, The Doll's House, Lady of Lyons, and Camilla. Financial difficulties between managers finally succeeded in closing the tour, and Mr. Keane made a venture into the stock companies. His first was with James Neill in Cincinnati, then followed seasons with the Giffen of Manhattan Beach, Denver, the Standard, Philadelphia, Meffert Stock of Louisville, Ky., and the Castle Square, Boston, Mass. During these years of stock, six several times broke away for production engagements in New York City. Again in October, 1900, when he originated one of the leading roles in Henrietta Crossman's ladder to fame. Mistress Nell. Six weeks later he resigned on Wednesday evening from Miss Crossman's company to open the next night across the street at Wallack's as Cecil Bryant, the leading role in Lumber & Co's production of the Greatest thing in the World, Sarah Cowell Le Moyne being the star. After the close of the New York engagement to the Castle Square Stock Company, Boston, where he has remained since. When asked in what part he considered he did his best work, Mr. Keane replied without hesitation, as Fierre, the straggler, in Eric Claxton's revival production of The Two Orphans at Park Theatre, Brooklyn, N. Y. Mr. Keane is completing arrangements to play a summer season in a circle of northern towns in order to break in his repertoire for the coming season on the Pacific Coast, desiring to establish a traveling stock company. A well known actress will be associated with him in this venture. His piece de resistance will be a play from the French by Dr. Daniel Cullaghan, author of The Legion of Honor, A Scrap of Paper, The Two Sisters, etc.

Below is an extract copied from the San Francisco Dramatic Review which will be of interest.

James Keane is well and favorably known in Eastern circles as an actor of rare skill and discretion. Until recently he has been absent from the Pacific Coast for ten years. For some weeks he has been enjoying a much needed rest. During his last engagement in Boston with the famous Castle Square Stock Company he appeared in one hundred and thirty-one different roles, ranging from low comedy to tragedy. This in itself is quite a record; but, Mr. Keane is blessed with remarkable study and appears none the worse for wear. Scarcely out of his twenties, he can yet count many years to come in the juvenile line of work. Although by nature well suited to the dramatic juvenile branch of the profession, Mr. Keane expresses a great fondness for the heavier character roles. He has had ample opportunity to decide on the line of business for which he is best adapted, as the following list of his many engagements will show. His first appearance was made with Chas. Frohman's Empire Theatre Stock Company in the Masqueraders. His spirit, however yearned for a greater, deeper field than the society drama afforded. He became associated with James O'Neill of Monte Cristo fame. A thorough schooling in the classic and romantic drama under this able veteran, brought its results and a New York debut. Although receiving liberal encouragement from the press, Mr. Keane realized that he was far too immature for the heavy roles he was essaying. Horatio in Hamlet and Fernando in Monte Cristo, being rather heavy material for a far older man. A chance soon presented itself however. The illness of the leading man gave Kathryn Kidder an opportunity of witnessing Mr. Keane's performance of Laertes in Hamlet and Albert in Monte Cristo. Miss Kidder immediately engaged Mr. Keane to play the leading role of de Neipperg in her production of Madam Sans Gene. This part originated by Jas. K. Hackett, and, that did so much for him, materially assisted Mr. Keane. At the close of the engagement, he accepted an offer to star in conjunction with Julia Stewart, touring the Middle States in Leab, Romeo and Juliet, The Doll's House, Lady of Lyons, and Camilla. Financial difficulties between managers finally succeeded in closing the tour, and Mr. Keane made a venture into the stock companies. His first was with James Neill in Cincinnati, then followed seasons with the Giffen of Manhattan Beach, Denver, the Standard, Philadelphia, Meffert Stock of Louisville, Ky., and the Castle Square, Boston, Mass. During these years of stock, six several times broke away for production engagements in New York City. Again in October, 1900, when he originated one of the leading roles in Henrietta Crossman's ladder to fame. Mistress Nell. Six weeks later he resigned on Wednesday evening from Miss Crossman's company to open the next night across the street at Wallack's as Cecil Bryant, the leading role in Lumber & Co's production of the Greatest thing in the World, Sarah Cowell Le Moyne being the star. After the close of the New York engagement to the Castle Square Stock Company, Boston, where he has remained since. When asked in what part he considered he did his best work, Mr. Keane replied without hesitation, as Fierre, the straggler, in Eric Claxton's revival production of The Two Orphans at Park Theatre, Brooklyn, N. Y. Mr. Keane is completing arrangements to play a summer season in a circle of northern towns in order to break in his repertoire for the coming season on the Pacific Coast, desiring to establish a traveling stock company. A well known actress will be associated with him in this venture. His piece de resistance will be a play from the French by Dr. Daniel Cullaghan, author of The Legion of Honor, A Scrap of Paper, The Two Sisters, etc.

Below is an extract copied from the San Francisco Dramatic Review which will be of interest.

James Keane is well and favorably known in Eastern circles as an actor of rare skill and discretion. Until recently he has been absent from the Pacific Coast for ten years. For some weeks he has been enjoying a much needed rest. During his last engagement in Boston with the famous Castle Square Stock Company he appeared in one hundred and thirty-one different roles, ranging from low comedy to tragedy. This in itself is quite a record; but, Mr. Keane is blessed with remarkable study and appears none the worse for wear. Scarcely out of his twenties, he can yet count many years to come in the juvenile line of work. Although by nature well suited to the dramatic juvenile branch of the profession, Mr. Keane expresses a great fondness for the heavier character roles. He has had ample opportunity to decide on the line of business for which he is best adapted, as the following list of his many engagements will show. His first appearance was made with Chas. Frohman's Empire Theatre Stock Company in the Masqueraders. His spirit, however yearned for a greater, deeper field than the society drama afforded. He became associated with James O'Neill of Monte Cristo fame. A thorough schooling in the classic and romantic drama under this able veteran, brought its results and a New York debut. Although receiving liberal encouragement from the press, Mr. Keane realized that he was far too immature for the heavy roles he was essaying. Horatio in Hamlet and Fernando in Monte Cristo, being rather heavy material for a far older man. A chance soon presented itself however. The illness of the leading man gave Kathryn Kidder an opportunity of witnessing Mr. Keane's performance of Laertes in Hamlet and Albert in Monte Cristo. Miss Kidder immediately engaged Mr. Keane to play the leading role of de Neipperg in her production of Madam Sans Gene. This part originated by Jas. K. Hackett, and, that did so much for him, materially assisted Mr. Keane. At the close of the engagement, he accepted an offer to star in conjunction with Julia Stewart, touring the Middle States in Leab, Romeo and Juliet, The Doll's House, Lady of Lyons, and Camilla. Financial difficulties between managers finally succeeded in closing the tour, and Mr. Keane made a venture into the stock companies. His first was with James Neill in Cincinnati, then followed seasons with the Giffen of Manhattan Beach, Denver, the Standard, Philadelphia, Meffert Stock of Louisville, Ky., and the Castle Square, Boston, Mass. During these years of stock, six several times broke away for production engagements in New York City. Again in October, 1900, when he originated one of the leading roles in Henrietta Crossman's ladder to fame. Mistress Nell. Six weeks later he resigned on Wednesday evening from Miss Crossman's company to open the next night across the street at Wallack's as Cecil Bryant, the leading role in Lumber & Co's production of the Greatest thing in the World, Sarah Cowell Le Moyne being the star. After the close of the New York engagement to the Castle Square Stock Company, Boston, where he has remained since. When asked in what part he considered he did his best work, Mr. Keane replied without hesitation, as Fierre, the straggler, in Eric Claxton's revival production of The Two Orphans at Park Theatre, Brooklyn, N. Y. Mr. Keane is completing arrangements to play a summer season in a circle of northern towns in order to break in his repertoire for the coming season on the Pacific Coast, desiring to establish a traveling stock company. A well known actress will be associated with him in this venture. His piece de resistance will be a play from the French by Dr. Daniel Cullaghan, author of The Legion of Honor, A Scrap of Paper, The Two Sisters, etc.

Below is an extract copied from the San Francisco Dramatic Review which will be of interest.

James Keane is well and favorably known in Eastern circles as an actor of rare skill and discretion. Until recently he has been absent from the Pacific Coast for ten years. For some weeks he has been enjoying a much needed rest. During his last engagement in Boston with the famous Castle Square Stock Company he appeared in one hundred and thirty-one different roles, ranging from low comedy to tragedy. This in itself is quite a record; but, Mr. Keane is blessed with remarkable study and appears none the worse for wear. Scarcely out of his twenties, he can yet count many years to come in the juvenile line of work. Although by nature well suited to the dramatic juvenile branch of the profession, Mr. Keane expresses a great fondness for the heavier character roles. He has had ample opportunity to decide on the line of business for which he is best adapted, as the following list of his many engagements will show. His first appearance was made with Chas. Frohman's Empire Theatre Stock Company in the Masqueraders. His spirit, however yearned for a greater, deeper field than the society drama afforded. He became associated with James O'Neill of Monte Cristo fame. A thorough schooling in the classic and romantic drama under this able veteran, brought its results and a New York debut. Although receiving liberal encouragement from the press, Mr. Keane realized that he was far too immature for the heavy roles he was essaying. Horatio in Hamlet and Fernando in Monte Cristo, being rather heavy material for a far older man. A chance soon presented itself however. The illness of the leading man gave Kathryn Kidder an opportunity of witnessing Mr. Keane's performance of Laertes in Hamlet and Albert in Monte Cristo. Miss Kidder immediately engaged Mr. Keane to play the leading role of de Neipperg in her production of Madam Sans Gene. This part originated by Jas. K. Hackett, and, that did so much for him, materially assisted Mr. Keane. At the close of the engagement, he accepted an offer to star in conjunction with Julia Stewart, touring the Middle States in Leab, Romeo and Juliet, The Doll's House, Lady of Lyons, and Camilla. Financial difficulties between managers finally succeeded in closing the tour, and Mr. Keane made a venture into the stock companies. His first was with James Neill in Cincinnati, then followed seasons with the Giffen of Manhattan Beach, Denver, the Standard, Philadelphia, Meffert Stock of Louisville, Ky., and the Castle Square, Boston, Mass. During these years of stock, six several times broke away for production engagements in New York City. Again in October, 1900, when he originated one of the leading roles in Henrietta Crossman's ladder to fame. Mistress Nell. Six weeks later he resigned on Wednesday evening from Miss Crossman's company to open the next night across the street at Wallack's as Cecil Bryant, the leading role in Lumber & Co's production of the Greatest thing in the World, Sarah Cowell Le Moyne being the star. After the close of the New York engagement to the Castle Square Stock Company, Boston, where he has remained since. When asked in what part he considered he did his best work, Mr. Keane replied without hesitation, as Fierre, the straggler, in Eric Claxton's revival production of The Two Orphans at Park Theatre, Brooklyn, N. Y. Mr. Keane is completing arrangements to play a summer season in a circle of northern towns in order to break in his repertoire for the coming season on the Pacific Coast, desiring to establish a traveling stock company. A well known actress will be associated with him in this venture. His piece de resistance will be a play from the French by Dr. Daniel Cullaghan, author of The Legion of Honor, A Scrap of Paper, The Two Sisters, etc.

Below is an extract copied from the San Francisco Dramatic Review which will be of interest.

James Keane is well and favorably known in Eastern circles as an actor of rare skill and discretion. Until recently he has been absent from the Pacific Coast for ten years. For some weeks he has been enjoying a much needed rest. During his last engagement in Boston with the famous Castle Square Stock Company he appeared in one hundred and thirty-one different roles, ranging from low comedy to tragedy. This in itself is quite a record; but, Mr. Keane is blessed with remarkable study and appears none the worse for wear. Scarcely out of his twenties, he can yet count many years to come in the juvenile line of work. Although by nature well suited to the dramatic juvenile branch of the profession, Mr. Keane expresses a great