Almost Wrecked

From the Del Norte Record.

The steamer Mandalay on leaving port for Monterey Bay last Saturday afternoon met with quite a mishap, narrowly escaping being a total wreck. On completing the load, consisting of pine and redwood, she pulled out and it was noticed that the high deckload gave her quite a list, and on rounding Fanadero Rock she dipped well over, continuing the course until Round Rock, over a mile out from the wharf, was reached, where she listed more and drifted out to the rock, which is fifty or sixty feet out of water, and struck three times and then swung clear, and after drifting quite a distance the keel and anchors thrown over board her. When she was at the rock, with a heavy list, water poured into her and flooded the fireroom, leaving the vessel helpless. Two boats were launched and the crew, and passengers F. Bartschell, A. Russell and one other, took to them, the passengers being brought ashore, and the other boat standing by the vessel. Finally the crew went aboard again, the steamer becoming waterlogged rested on an even keel. A boat with members of the wharf crew put off and helped to throw the deck load overboard. Fortunately the ocean was calm at the time of the accident.

A telephone message was sent to Eureka for a tug to tow the disabled vessel to San Francisco and on Sunday morning the tug Ranger came up and a few hours later started southward with her tow, making slow progress. On arriving off Humbolt Bar it was concluded to take her in and she was put on a mud flat where it was discovered that a small hole had been made in the vessel's side, near the stern, where she drifted on the rock. She was to be patched up and towed to Monterey, and the cargo discharged, then taken to San Francisco to be repaired.
