A GIFT FROM FRANCE.

The Paris Exposition of 1889, which was held in honor of the centenary of the French Revolution, was attended by representatives from all parts of the world. The United States was represented by a large exhibition of works of art and manufactures, which included a fine collection of American paintings and sculpture. Among the many gifts presented to the United States by France in recognition of the American Revolution was a statue of Liberty, which was placed in the Rotonde of the Palace of the Legion of Honor, Paris.

EDISON'S TRIUMPH.

The first electric light was exhibited at the Paris Exposition of 1889, and was a great success. The electric light was introduced by Thomas A. Edison, who had invented the electric telegraph and the phonograph. The electric light was a great step forward in the development of electricity, and was a great success.
