"You may return to your seats," he said. "Miss Miranda, I shall expect you to remain after school until that lesson is recited perfectly."

"What?" cried the girl. Involunta rily she fell back a step, hardly believing her own ears. That any one should dare address her, Miranda Hemming, in such fashion? Raymond's expression did not change.

"You heard what I said," he returned quietly. "It should not take long." For a moment Miranda, stupefied, hesitated, then she flounced indignantly back to her seat. The whole school, which had dropped all work to listen to the passage at arms between Miranda and the teacher, fairly shivered, and Tom Carruthers, a big. loutish chap of nineteen, shot a sullen look at Raymond. To scold Miranda! To the quivering excitement of the school, the time until 4 o'clock appeared fairly to tly. Would teacher really keep in Miranda?

When the others arose, Miranda also sprang to her feet. Then something in the teacher's expression caused her to sink back in her seat, tingling and abashed. It took an unusually long time for the pupils to disperse that day, but at last they were all gone.

"You need not think that I shall study that lesson," she declared with sharp emphasis. Raymond nodded.

"As you please," he answered. "Only here we both stay until you do." "And I'm not to have any supper?"

incredulously. "Not until you learn that lesson."

"But"- burst out Miranda furiously. Then she closed her lips with a snap and leaned back, her hands tempestuously folded before her. Raymond picked up a book.

"Take your own time," he said pleasantly.

Admiral of the Navy. Admiral Dewey, who, to give him his proper title, should be spoken of always as the admiral of the navy without any given name, just as Mr. Cannon is on all formal occasions the peaker of the house, ranks higher than the head of the army. The admiral of the navy holds his rank by special act of congress and is recognized at home and abroad as the highest officer of our national defense. General Chaffee is lieutenant general chief of staff, the head of the army, inasmuch as this service has no general of the army

Dean of the Diplomats. The dean of the diplomatic corps is lways the ranking member of that pody and is the oldest ambassador in point of service in Washington. At present Count Cassini of Russia holds this position, to which he succeeded three years ago on the death of the late Lord Pauncefote, the first ambassador from Great Britain. Count Casshi having lately been notified of his transfer to Madrid his mantle will fall upon Baron Mayor des Planches, the ambassador from Italy. The latter is a comparatively young man who arrived in Washington just four years ago and is likely to remain at his present post for many years, which will give the Italian embassy a prominence heretobe cheaper. fore unknown.

> Miss Julia Seaman, a once popular actress, was so severely criticised when she played Hamlet some years ago that she turned round on her critics and assailed them in a very vigorous manner. The late Miss Marriott, who had one of the most beautiful volces ever heard on any stage, was more fortunate, although it was one of her least successful assumptions, and in the fifties an American actress, Miss Percy Knowles, made such an unfortunate exhibition of herself as the melancholy one that a country manager actually issued a no-

Ellen Tree (Mrs. Charles Kean) was the first to put on Hamlet's doublet and hose; Mrs. Glover won Edmund Kean's approval by her playing of the part, and Mme.
