The Sunday Visitors. There was an excursion from Coquille and Myrtle Point, to this place, last Sunday, and a considerable number of persons embraced the opportunity offered to visit Bandon and the beach, the Capelle Carnet Band being in attendance and discoursing excellent music for the occasion.

Sunday was not a choice day for an excursion as the northwest wind was not on its good behavior, and the day was cold and windy, but it is not our purpose to speak much of the day, neither of the band, nor of the excursionists generally, as they are not accountable for the boisterous and drunken conduct of a considerable number who came with the excursion, and who, like the Northwest wind, were not on their good behavior, either.

Among those who made themselves conspicuous, was a lot of boys ranging in age from about 17 years up to young manhood, many being natives, whose conduct showed they had been indulging freely in intoxicants, while a large number of this class left for home with a quart bottle stored away in each hip pocket, their coat tails concealing their stock in drink. One young man, not out of his teens yet, but bereft of all self respect through the influence of liquor, swung a quart bottle around his head as the last boat was leaving, as though it was a thing to be cherished and respected as a patriotic citizen would cherish and wave the flag of his country. Another of his companions of more mature age, but with no more self respect, did likewise.

It is not pleasant to report drunken orgies, neither is it edifying to read of them, but it is time that the public opened its eyes to the heinousness of such revelry and cleanse itself from such irruptions. A young lady who viewed this exhibition was heard to remark something after this style: "If a dry town produces results such as these witnessed here today, the Lord save us from a dry town."

But the fault does not lie in prohibition, even if these had been given to drink until the habit had made them slaves to their appetites, but it shows rather the danger to which the youths of our land have been exposed through the liquor traffic.

Every time one of these minors came into possession of whiskey or other intoxicants, somebody was a law breaker, and this form of anarchy is altogether too common for the welfare of society.

Gold Beach Shooting Scrape. Gold Beach was treated to another shooting scrape, Monday night, C. J. Smith being the man behind the gun. The shots were fired at Walter Tinker and Myron Shannon, but neither were hit. However, they both bit the ground as fast as they could, so parties say that they were looking on. It seems that Smith had invited Tinker down to take supper, so he and Billy Wilson went down; Billy stopped outside of the gate, and Walter went in and knocked on the door, and getting no answer, opened the door and stepped in. (Smith says he broke in); just about that time, Smith fired from his bedroom, through the wall, so we are told. The first shot was all the warning Walter needed to take to his heels. Smith followed, firing his revolver until discharged of all the shots, then took his smokeless rifle. About this time, Shannon, being out on the flat in front of Smith's house, heard the firing and called to him to know what it all meant, when Smith at once turned and shot at him three times, so we are told, coming closer each time. Some of the shots from the pistol was toward a crowd of about 50 people who were watching Mr. Butler who was giving an exhibition of the powers of the fire extinguisher, striking Hugh Johnston, also an overcoat that Mr. Benham carried on his arm, when, just at this moment the greatest stampede that has occurred in Curry County, for years, took place, all losing interest in the fire. However, the balls were well spent, doing no serious damage, except a hole in Mr. Benham's coat, and quite a red spot on Mr. Johnston's shoulder, just under and back of the arm.—Gold Beach Globe.

Davis, President of the Missouri Society of Oregon, has issued a letter urging all former Missourians and descendants of Missourians in Oregon and Washington, to make every effort to be present at the Lewis and Clark Exposition on the 14th of September, which is to be Missouri Day. Governor Joseph W. Folk will be present; he will be tendered a reception and will make a speech. There are more than 20,000 natives of Missouri, living in Oregon alone, and it is expected that Missouri Day will bring one of the largest crowds yet seen at the Fair, as everybody seems eager to meet the young Governor of Missouri. Governor Folk is only 35 years of age, but is already a national figure.
