THURSDAY, MAY 17, 1906.

The Coast Mail prints the following article which seems to the RECORDER to be too drastic in attacking the commercial men and probably unequalled for. As far as the city of Portland is concerned, it is an admitted fact that under normal conditions there can be no great volume of business transacted between the Oregon metropolis and Coos county. California and the city of San Francisco has always been the market for our products. Our southern neighbors have developed the trade, invested money here in various industries and a large fleet of vessels is engaged in the traffic. Naturally they have captured the business of the county and just as soon as the wholesalers in San Francisco are prepared to receive orders, the business, which is temporarily going to Portland, will revert back to them, principally because the transportation facilities are so much better.

Nevertheless it would be to our mutual advantage if Portland could create a market for some of our products and could see her way clear to help develop our latent resources and thus get on an equal footing with the southern city.

As for their prices being too high, we should at least be charitable. Perhaps they haven't the facilities for competing—or, perhaps they need the money.

PORTLAND'S WAY.

When the Alliance left Portland for Coos Bay on her last trip she carried a hardy band of adventurers, fitted out by the thrifty "wholesalers" of that metropolis, with glass beads, looking glasses, brass earrings, flintlock muskets, bright-colored calico and other inexpensive trifles dear to the savage heart, with which they hoped to acquire by barter a rich harvest of pelts, ivory, gold etc.—especially gold—from the untutored natives of the Coos Bay wilderness. Many of these gentry were surprised, on the arrival of the steamer here, to find that we wear cloths and live in houses, very much like white folks.

In spite of the deceptive appearances, however, they were not fooled into the notion that we are anything but savages, and some of the crowd have been unable to so suddenly adjust themselves to the situation and have paraded their pitiable hand-fuls of goods before our merchants as though they really expected to make an impression.

Perhaps the Mail is somewhat touched with Portlandphobia, but it does go against the grain to see a lot of vultures swoop down on this community at this time, with this legend plainly written on their tail-feathers: "Now we've got you! You must buy of us and buy what we please to give you."

It is true that Coos Bay may be placed temporarily—very temporarily—somewhat in the position of the Willamette valley and other parts of Oregon, which, through the connivance of the railroads and the absence of another available seaport, lie at the mercy of Portland. That city is getting more trade from Coos Bay right now than she ever did before—and more than she ever will again unless she changes her tactics.

Let us ask again: What has Portland ever done for Coos Bay? What productive industry on Coos Bay has been inaugurated with Portland capital? Where is the sawmill, the woodenware factory, the coal mine, the creamery, the cheese factory, the enterprise large or small employing even one man, in which Portland capital is interested? Where is the Coos Bay mine or mill or factory finding a market for its products in Portland? Where is the transportation line to Coos Bay maintained by Portland enterprise?

San Francisco lies in ruins, but she is consuming more of Coos Bay's products today than Portland ever has or ever will. San Francisco merchants lost their houses and their goods, but it is a safe bet that any dealer in Marshfield can mail an order to his old firm tonight, and come nearer getting what he wants, at the right price and at the right time, than by sending the same order to the pawnshop on the Willamette.

Cultivate closer relations with Portland? No! Let Portland cultivate closer relations with us, if she likes. When she comes to us in a business-like way, let us meet her half way—but even then, "beware the sleek Greek bearing gifts." Let us not fall over ourselves to show how tickled we are that a job lot of one-horse pirates should jump in and try to capture trade which they had no chance to get in open competition with the CITY which has always done the right thing by us. We have a Farmers and Shippers' Congress at North Bend this month. Nothing could be better, if it conduce to a better understanding between Coos Bay and those portions of the state whose hope lies in the improvement of this harbor. Let it not be a love feast with Portland. Go to a mulch with fear and trembling and a lump of sugar, and look out. If you want him to work, take a club.—Coast Mail.

"Politics makes strange bed-fellows," but the primary election brought out some results which we fear are going to prove disastrous to the republican party this year. Bourne, the man who made such a strenuous campaign on the "Statement No. 1" issue received the most votes in the primary and is therefore the republican nominee for U. S. Senator, yet he will have the fight of his life and the party lash must be diligently and persistently applied if he ever becomes senator from Oregon. Right in line with the senatorial fight is the election of a representative from Coos County. It is a hard thing to say, but it is conceded by many that a democratic representative will be elected from this county which has a good republican majority. Another primary mix-up is for the office of county surveyor. Mr. McCulloch, the present incumbent, who has had the office for only one term and is justly entitled to at least another term, was defeated in a three cornered contest by just a few votes for the nomination by Mr. Cathcart, who held the office for about twenty years. Under the circumstances Mr. McCulloch's friends urged him to become an independent candidate, and is more than probable that he will be elected and the primary candidate defeated. There's certainly something doing in the political line this year.

Here is a bit of wisdom from the Arlington Record: "Never argue with a man just for the purpose of killing time. Learn this one thing early in life, and learn it well, that the man who does not believe as you do is not always a fool. The fact that you hold views not in accord with your neighbor is not proof positive that you are right, and he is wrong, nor is it any evidence that your neighbor is insincere. If this were not true, then all smart men would belong to one party, and all good men to one church. And if all belonged to one party and one church, they would break up both party and church."
