Construction Work Soon to Begin on New Coast Road.

"Actual construction work on the railroad line from Drain to Coos Bay has been commenced. Gangs of men are clearing the right of way westward from Drain," said Jefferson Myers, who has just returned via the Drain stage route from North Bend and Marshfield.

Mr. Myers declared the proposed route of the Harriman road down the Umpqua river would be as great a scenic route as the Columbia river. The road will follow the Umpqua for miles, and that stream is said to be one of the most beautiful in Oregon. There are magnificent heights, sentinel rocks and gorges. Nature has here been most extravagant with her foliage. The river is about the size of the Willamette.

"On Coos bay will be the second city in Oregon," said Mr. Myers. "North Bend and Marshfield will become one city. I predict that in 10 years from this date they will have 50,000 people. The combined cities should be called 'Coos City,' or some similar title by which the term 'Coos' may be preserved in the municipal directory. I know that the people of the east regard them simply as Coos bay towns, and have no recollection of their separate entities. When they write to me making inquiries concerning something they saw at the exposition they refer simply to 'Coos,' and no particular town is ever mentioned. My prediction is that the growth of these cities will be greater than any Oregon city ever saw. They have the right kind of men to start with—men who are strictly up to date, liberal, and who do things. The railroad that will be built along the bay connecting North Bend and Marshfield eventually will run through the water front of one combined, solid city.

"The trip from Coos bay to Gardiner, a town of 600 people, on the Umpqua river, is 22 miles and is a fine wagon road across the beach. Gardiner is called the 'white city.' Every house is painted white. The late Senator Reed, who founded the place, inserted in every deed a provision that the purchaser should paint his house white. The people have become wedded to the custom, and now take a pride in it. The effect is remarkable, and with the green background of Oregon coast forest and foliage, it makes one of the most beautiful sights I ever witnessed. The mouth of the Umpqua has 18 feet of water, and has never had the expenditure of a dollar of government money. The Southern Pacific's Coos bay extension will cross the river at the bay, eight miles east of Gardiner. The bay has 20 feet of water to the point of the crossing, where there will probably be built a new town.

"Fifteen miles up the river is Scottsburg, at the head of present steam navigation. This place is the oldest commercial center in Oregon. It was the first place where wholesale houses were established in the state, and is said to have once been the point of the largest customs receipts in Oregon. It was the early home of Judge Deady and other Oregon pioneers. The railroad will pass through it, and the residents believe the former commercial greatness of the town is to be restored. It now has about 200 people. The old town is practically decayed, and a new town is being built."

Elkton is 20 miles farther up the river. About 200 people reside here. It was founded by the late Senator Beckley, whose widow still lives in the old home place on the banks of the Umpqua. The town is named by the junction of the Elk and Umpqua rivers. The railroad will here leave the Umpqua and follow the Elk river to Drain, about 16 miles. The country is rich in farming and stock raising, besides timber and coal. There are now piled up at Drain steel rails sufficient to build 82 miles of track. Engineers employed on the survey who were interviewed at Drain said that the route had been definitely located and right of way secured from Drain to the crossing of the Umpqua between Scottsburg and Gardiner. From there through the Ten-Mile Lake country to Coos bay the route is still to be finally determined among the several surveys made. The engineers have orders to locate a feasible route with a maximum grade not to exceed one half of 1 per cent. A railroad of the first class will be built.—Portland Journal.

A gill net was found on the beach last Saturday which had in it a sea lion, a shark and several salmon. Hamersly skinned the lion to send home to his folks, while Chris Long, Emil and Fred Pike were at work disentangling the web. There were about 50 fathoms of net, and as it was too deep for Rogue river and not deep enough for the Columbia, the wonder is, where did it come from?

J. W. Bennett has announced the engagement of his daughter, Miss Elsie to Arthur McKeown of Berkeley, Cal.

"A number of ailments, some of them dangerous, are comprised under the general head of postage stamp tongue," said a physician. "Postage stamp tongue, in a word, is any disorder contracted from the licking of postage stamps. Three or four persons a week visit me with postage stamp tongues. They have throat trouble, or skin disease, or a pulmonary complaint, brought on by the reckless habit of stamp-licking."

COQUILLE NEWS NOTES

Leander, Our Correspondent Tells of the Week's Incidents at the Hub.

Winter weather still remaineth with us, summer and sunshine is dilatory in coming to remain, and it is working a hardship upon the farmer who has low land, and at the present time has a surplus of water.

The recent freshet was sufficient to enable the loggers to bring out the remainder of their logs, aggregating about 9000 logs, filling all of the booms. This will replenish the mills so that together with the camps on the tide water the mills can now operate to their full capacity and continue so during the summer.

Our election passed off smooth and harmonious. While a considerable of interest was manifest in the different amendments and candidates, let us bury the hatchet and dispel from our minds all trivial animosity incurred during the campaign, and work together for the best interest of all in the future.

I see your Prosper correspondent, in the last issue of the Recorder, charges me with bashfulness and timidity when Miss Chase, the suffrage campaigner, was a passenger on one of the boats. Now I am not going to palliate or deny any of the allegations for I am governed by the rigid blue laws of Connecticut, for LuLu has read the riot act to me, whereas if she ever heard of me paying attention or becoming infatuated with any of the fair young ladies, she would forthwith cancel our engagement. Now when the aforesaid campaigner came aboard of the steamer accompanied with a bevy of Coquille's fairest rosy and Ruby cheeked young ladies, is it to be wondered at that I was confused and nonplused? Once I did venture to go to the hurricane deck, but when partly up, the melody of those feminine voices reminded me of a photograph or an automatic talking machine. Wind one of them up and they will run 24 hours without stopping. Under those circumstances am I to be condemned for being faint hearted.

There is a problem that needs analyzing which is more intricate than the amendments embodied in the election ballots. Why is it, on a Sunday, when the young ladies go to the city-by-the-sea to bear what the wild waves are saying, is it necessary that two of Bandon's young business men should have important business at the county seat that required their immediate attention. Also, what perquisite does the Captain receive, or is he in collusion with them, that the young ladies are so busily engaged in conversation that they are carried past their destination.

Port Orford.

By this time Mr. Bauer's hydraulic giant is tearing into the gravel on Elk River, and will open up the first extensive mining operations ever done on Elk river.

Mr. Melville and family from Seattle have been at Knapp's hotel some time, waiting for the weather to clear up, before going to their Homestead location on Elk river.

The ladies of Dairyville have organized a Basket Ball team and will no doubt give the Port Orford girls a match in the near future.

J. T. White of Bandon brought down a lot of baggage for parties who intend to take up claims near Brush creek. He also brought a consignment of paper for the Tribune, which comes just in the "nick of time."

The steamer Plant came to Sunday night about ten o'clock from Coos Bay, came up near the wharf and although it was fairly smooth, pulled out and sailed for San Francisco, leaving our merchants in no enviable humor, as they had a full lot of supplies on her, which are badly needed here. Besides there was considerable butter awaiting shipment to the city. The people of Port Orford and Northern Curry should own a suitable vessel and build a wharf of their own. It can be easily done if they will only get together and talk it up.
