Prosperity Will Not Down.

Days have drifted into weeks and weeks have drifted into months since the high financiers of the East began predicting distress for the country unless there should be abandonment of the Government's policy of bringing to book some of the chief offenders against the laws. And yet the predicted panic does not appear. It seems in fact to be farther in the future than it was six months ago, and on every hand appear evidences of continued prosperity. Paul Morton, whose prominence in the financial world entitles his opinions to special consideration, has just returned from Europe, and is quoted in a New York dispatch in Friday's Oregonian as follows:

I have seen nothing on the other side to indicate that there is trouble ahead either for us or for European countries. As long as the crops continue to be good America is bound to be prosperous, and by that I do not mean that Wall street must necessarily prosper. When there are big crops to be moved the railroads must do well, and if here and there some railroad man says he will do this or that, it doesn't mean anything. There are forces back of him which will force expansion of facilities, if there is any demand for them.

Out here in the Far West we may be inclined to question Mr. Morton's statement that the pessimistic railroad men will be forced to an "expansion of facilities if there is any demand for them," for evidences of the demand are too plain to be mistaken; but there is no questioning the soundness of his logic regarding the perpetuity of prosperity so long as crops remain good. The situation abroad is apparently not greatly different from that at home. The peculiar system of finance followed by some of our Wall Street railroad men has naturally brought American railroad securities into a higher degree of honesty and fair dealing is insisted on than on this side of the ocean. Having become alarmed over disclosure of some of the methods followed in American railroading this foreign capital sought investment in other lines than American railroads. The same was true in this country, and that it was a lack of confidence rather than lack of money which troubled Wall Street was quite plainly apparent a few days ago when the city of New York was offered more than $200,000,000 for municipal bonds bearing 4 1/2 per cent interest.

A few days before, a $75,000,000 bond issue of the Union Pacific, which, with the discount at which the bonds were offered, made the rate of interest practically the same as that paid by the city of New York, was thrown back on the hands of the underwriting syndicate with less than one-twentieth of the lot sold. The fate of the Union Pacific bonds might well be said to indicate a great scarcity of money but the fallacy of this theory is shown a few days later, when a loan of nearly three times the amount is promptly snapped up.

Locally the requirements for moving the largest wheat crop on record, together with legitimate demands for money for other industrial enterprises, have made a seeming scarcity of money along the Coast. But if anyone with an unquestionably safe and well-secured proposition is anxious to demonstrate that money is not actually scarce, but is at work or in seclusion, let him offer 10 per cent to 15 per cent interest for almost any amount and it will be forthcoming.

The money of this country is quite actively engaged at the present time, but there is a considerable amount of it that has been withdrawn until the wave of pessimism has spent its force. Evidence that some of it is already coming out of hiding is now noticeable, and by the time we finish marketing the most valuable crop of agricultural products ever produced in the United States, reserves will accumulate much faster and any pessimist who attempts to indulge in gloomy predictions will meet with nothing but well-deserved derision.—Oregonian.

The Public Land Thieves.

Since the whisky ring, in the disgraceful days of Grant's administration, there has never been so bold and so shameless a gang of plunderers as the public land thieves of today. Though there have been many exposures of wrong-doing on the part of this able company of conspirators, and though the revelations have implicated some public men, yet the proportion of convictions, in spite of incriminating and almost indubitable evidence, has been disgracefully small.

There is a growing feeling that the co-operation between the Interior Department and the office of the Attorney-General is not what it might be, and that the latter has for some of his assistants incompetent prosecuting officers. What is needed by the Attorney-General is a few more men like Heney, of San Francisco, and Hooley, of Missouri.

It was prophesied that Mr. Garfield would not prove so active and implacable a public officer as his predecessor, but this may have been a misjudgement. The new Secretary has before him a task calling for astuteness as well as political courage. Some of the most influential Senators and Representatives from the Western States are champions of those who are trying to overturn the laws passed to protect the common people and who are throwing every possible obstacle in the way of those laws' enforcement. With the connivance of powerful influences in the House and the Senate these men are undermining the land and forestry laws in such a manner as to pave the way for iron-bound trusts to monopolize the public domain and to destroy wantonly the people's heritage of timber.—The Reader.
