Where the Shoe Pinched.

"If they don't quit making that child cry," sighed the flat dweller as his sobs echoed pitifully through the court, "I am going to apply to the board of health and have it stopped. There's a limit to everything."
"Why the board of health?" asked her friend. "I should think you would apply to the Society For the Prevention of Cruelty to Children."
"I am not thinking so much of him," acknowledged the flat dweller contritely, "as I am of my own health. His constant sobbing is getting on my nerves so that I can't sleep."—New York Press.

The Sun's Heat.

It is not impossible to express the marvelous power of the sun's heat, but we can admit without shame that it is impossible to comprehend it. The heat emitted by the sun in each second is equal to that which would result from the combustion of eleven quadrillions six hundred thousand milliards of tons of coal burning at the same time. This same heat would boil per hour seven hundred thousand millions of cubic miles of water at the temperature of ice. Attempt to understand this! As well might the ant attempt to drink the ocean!

A Sailor No Longer.

Painting is almost a continuous performance on some of the ocean liners. "On a certain ship one day," said a traveler, "I put my hand on a freshly painted ventilator, and while removing the white smear I fell into conversation with the seaman who was responsible for the trouble. He was an elderly chap, and he had visited many outlandish places. As he plied the brush we had an interesting chat. 'How long have you been a sailor?' said I finally. 'Sailor?' the old man grumbled, dipping his brush into the can. 'Bless yer heart, sir, I'm no sailor nowadays. I'm a bloomina' artist, that's wot I am!'"

CARRYING UMBRELLAS.

Few People Manage Them to the Best Advantage.

"Curious about how some people carry umbrellas," said Mr. Stormelton. "We think the ostrich is a stupid bird because with its head buried in the sand it thinks its whole body is hidden from everybody. But plenty of men are quite as stupid as that in their manner of carrying an umbrella.

"They carry it in such a way as to protect the front of their bodies and appear to think they have themselves wholly protected, while all the time the water is gaily dripping down their backs. The fact is that not many men know how to carry an umbrella when it rains.

"If it rains and blows then instinctively they hold the umbrella toward the wind to keep the umbrella from being blown inside out as well as to protect themselves from the rain. This is proper. But when the rain is coming down straight they carry their umbrellas in all sorts of ways, in which they reveal more or less of their personal characteristics.

"Here, for instance, is a man who carries his umbrella held in his right hand with the hand straight in front of and in line with his elbow and upper arm, this being the easiest way to carry it. Held in this manner the umbrella really shelters completely only his head and the right side of his body. The rain drips from it on his left shoulder and down his left side. He is either lazy or thoughtless. He is probably both.

"Again we may meet a man carrying an umbrella at the cost of considerable effort around in front of the center line of his body, which is correct as to that position, but carrying it there too far forward, with the result that while he keeps perfectly dry on his face side, yet more or less water drips down his back—a man finicky and particular about the front he presents, about appearances, but not so mindful of the substance.

"And then we meet the man who carries his umbrella with fore arm straight in line with his elbow, for the greater ease of that position of the arm, but with the hand slightly turned so as to make the umbrella more completely cover him or with that end in view, which end, however, it does not accomplish, for with the umbrella top tilted it does not cover so large an area as it does when carried in a horizontal plane. This is a man who is lazy, but trying by that twist of the hand to get something for nothing or without much effort.

"And then we may occasionally meet a man who is carrying his umbrella in the best possible position for the purposes of the best possible protection to be gained from it, this being square in front of him, with the umbrella handle all but touching the center of the front edge of the rim of his hat, carried so as to protect him as far as may be both back and front, while he carries the umbrella as low down as can be without touching his hat on top, thus giving himself also protection as far as possible down around toward his feet. And here we find a man who knows intelligently what can be done with the means at his command and who is willing to put forth the effort required to bring those means to their utmost efficiency."—New York Sun.

His Son's West Side.

"How are you, Mr. Smith? How is that son of yours making it with his new motor bicycle?"

"Oh, he had quite a tumble the other day," replied Mr. Smith. "He was speeding at about forty miles an hour along a rough macadam road when all of a sudden the darn machine stopped stone still, but my son kept on going from the momentum and slid along the road for about fifty feet before he could stop himself."

"You don't say! Did it hurt your son?"

"No, it didn't hurt him to speak of, but he tore the west side of his pants."

"Tore the what?"

"Tore the west side of his pants." "Well, in the name of whizzing wheels, what side of your son's pants is the west side?"

"Why, the side the son sets on." —Philadelphia Inquirer.

Work Fit For Sunday.

A stickler for the good old ways, which we all admit to be the best, dropped in from church to see a young woman who was a writer. To the great surprise and horror of the dear old lady, the writer was at work. The cheery click-click of the typewriter sounded from her den.

"Oh, my dear girl," exclaimed the shocked caller, "you have not so far forgotten your early training as to be composing on Sunday?"

"Oh, my dear, only jokes—and they are all jokes on religious subjects."

MARRIAGE LOTTERIES.

Business Schemes In Which Husbands Were the Premiums.

Some years ago a tailor of Brussels took into his employ a young man on the stipulation that he should be allowed to dispose of him in marriage.

When the agreement was signed the tailor widely advertised the fact that he had in stock a husband to bestow upon the widow or maiden who should bring him the most custom during the year.

Keen competition resulted. At the end of the year it was found that the prize had been won by a widow of sixty years. Quite gleefully she took her husband home and introduced him to her eight sons. It is said that she was so well pleased with her bargain that she induced a large number of relatives to give their patronage to the tailor permanently.

This idea of the tailor seemed good to a number of other business men of the continent, and for a time there was quite an eruption of advertisements and posters announcing husbands to be disposed of.

Every New Year's day a large Viennese firm of bootmakers went to offer a husband to the lady whose foot was considered to be the smallest and most shapely of the year, guaranteeing at the same time to set the couple up in business should such help be needed.

For over twenty years was this practice continued, until the head of the firm, an old widower, fell in love with and himself married the Cinderella footed lady, who, being of an ultra jealous disposition, sternly vetoed the custom's continuance.

Only recently a Berlin tradesman issued a circular promising to bestow a husband, in the person of his son, upon the spinster who shall within a year's space collect the most coupons, one of which is given with each purchase to the value of 5 marks. To the prize husband as a wedding gift he has promised to bestow a share in his business.

Some years ago a Leeds firm circulated among its customers attractive tokens, whereon was depicted a stylishly dressed man surrounded by the legend, "A Husband For a Guinea," signifying that such as expended that amount on the firm's goods were allowed one chance in a raffle for an eligible young man, the junior partner in the house.—London Tit-Bits.

Ways of the Cuban.

Without doubt the best index to Cuban character is to be found in his conversation. Standing in the streets of his native village, sober, discussing with his neighbor crops, the weather or other like commonplace, he habitually uses an excited manner, florid language and exaggerated gesticulation that elsewhere in the world would cause perhaps his reproach for disorder or put him under suspicion of being drunk or a lunatic. A popular and oft repeated proverb says: "A man has no small enemies," affords almost as good a pointer. This means that of equal importance in his view is the threat of a pin prick or of the deadly stroke of a dagger. Such an emotional, unself-contained nature, such an exaggerated, strained view of things, can but constantly lead to foolish extremes.—Army and Navy Life.

"An Awful Thing."

A certain man whose wife had recently got angry and gone away to live with her mother was met by a friend, who in apparent sympathy accosted him thus:

"Man, Jamie, this is an awful thing that has befallen you. It's a great peety that your wife has gone an' left you."

"Deed, man," quote Jamie, "she'll dae waur than that yet."

"What waur can she dae than that?" anxiously inquired his friend. "She'll come back again," replied Jamie ruefully.—Pearson's Weekly.

Followed His Example.

A New Yorker who does his bit of "globe trotting" tells of two old entries that he saw in the visitors' book of a fashionable resort on the Rhine.

A few years ago one of the Paris members of the Rothschild family had registered as follows: "R. de Paris."

It so chanced that the next visitor to inscribe his name in the book was Baron Ouenheim, the banker of Cologne, and he wrote his name beneath Rothschild's in this wise: "O. de Cologne."
