Clipped Up to Him.

The proprietor of the celebrated mountain inn was showing the new guest the beautiful surroundings. "Ah, these cliffs!" said the proprietor rapturously. "In an electrical storm they are awe inspiring. The next time a storm rises see that you are standing on the porch of the inn. Why, sir, the air is always heavily charged."

"I don't doubt it," laughed the new guest, winking at another late arrival, "and if I don't happen to be standing on the porch I can feel assured that it will be heavily charged anyway—on my bill."—Chicago News.

Hourglasses For Pulpits.

The twenty minute sermon is a purely modern invention, as is proved by the number of pulpit hourglasses that are still to be found in many old churches. In the register of St. Catherine's, Aldgate, the following entry, dated 1564, occurs: "Paid for an hourglass that hanged by the pulpit, where the preacher doth make a sermon, that he may know how the hour passeth away, 1 shilling." A modern pulpit glass, probably the only one of its kind, is to be found in the Chapel Royal, Savoy. It is an eighteen minute glass and was placed in the chapel on its restoration in 1867.—Westminster Gazette.

A French Joke.

Magistrate—The plaintiff affirms that you sold him an absolutely rank cheese, although you told him it was the king of cheeses when he bought it of you.

Defendant—Quite true, but I never said it was a good one. I simply said it was the king of cheeses.

Magistrate—Well? Defendant—Well, in my opinion the king of cheeses would be the worst. Are we republicans or are we not, sir?—Pele Mele.

A MISSING BUTTON.

The Way a French Detective Found a Criminal to Confess.

Theatric indeed are some of the methods of the French detectives. They look for the little clues rather than the staring ones. Unlike the English and American detectives, they often do not wait to get irrefutable evidence before charging a man with crime, but first charge him with the crime and play upon him so that if he is guilty he is led to confess.

Some time ago a woman was murdered in Paris, and from her room were stolen 750 francs in money, her watch and jewelry. Two brothers, George and Paul Amot, had been seen near the house. The night of the day after the murder was committed M. Hamard, chief of detectives of Paris, entered a wine shop where the two brothers were drinking. To the man's amazement he arrested George, charging him with the murder.

"You have changed your coat," he said to the man, a safe guess if he had committed the murder. "It was gray this morning, and there is blood on it."

"My nose was bleeding," replied the man. "From excitement, I suppose," said Hamard, "excitement caused by your robbery of Mme. Lucas yesterday evening."

"I was nowhere near Mme. Lucas last night," said the man, becoming very pale.

"You lie!" roared Hamard. "Look at your left boot!"

Every one saw the third button from the boot was missing.

"Here's the button," said Hamard, producing one. "It was found in your victim's blood. Confess!"

The man confessed. As Hamard afterward said, he had guessed the murderer. The detection of the missing button from the man's shoe was accidental.

Military Marches.

In military music the march occupies a prominent position and has been employed not only to stimulate courage, but also from about the middle of the seventeenth century to insure the orderly advance of troops. One of the earliest instances of rhythmical march is the Welsh war strain, "The March of the Men of Harlech," which is supposed to have originated during the siege of Harlech castle in 1468. In England the military march was of somewhat later development. Sir John Hawkins in his "History of Music" tells us that its characteristic was dignity and gravity, in which respect it differed greatly from the French, which was brisk and alert. And apropos of this subject the same author notes a witty reply of an Elizabethan soldier to the French Marshal Biron's remark that "the English march, being beaten by the drum, was slow, heavy and sluggish." "That may be true," he said, "but slow as it is it has traversed your master's country from one end to the other."—Chambers' Journal.

Run Them to Skin and Bone.

A New Yorker who sometimes varies his horseback riding by taking trips through the rail fence belt of Long Island noticed on one such trip a farmer sitting dejectedly on one such fence. At the farmer's feet was a litter of little pigs so thin they gave the impression of having but one dimension.

"What happened the squealers?" the rider asked.

The farmer beckoned him to come close, then hoarsely whispered: "Lost my voice. Them was the fattest pigs I ever seen. I used to come out and call 'em to me and feed 'em three times a day. Lost my voice and had to call 'em to grub by rapping with my stick on the fence. See? Now the darn woodpeckers is driving them pigs crazy."—New York Sun.

With Loss of Interest.

There is a police court magistrate of St. Louis who frequently evinces a pretty wit in dealing with fresh or facetious offenders.

To one vagrant brought before him not long ago his honor put the question, "What occupation?" "Nothin' much at present," flipantly responded the prisoner; "just curculatin' round, judge."

"Retired from circulation for thirty days," dryly observed his honor to the clerk of the court.—Harper's Weekly.

Hard on the Eyes.

"You always think of a clerk or bookkeeper as the boy with the job that's hard on the eyes," remarked an elevator man the other day. "But this is the job that gets your eyes, or at least it does me. You see, we are obliged to look straight ahead of us, and the blur of things as we try unconsciously to focus our eyes on them makes a constant strain. I would rather be bending over a set of books myself, so far as my eyes are concerned."—Columbus Dispatch.

Fruit Cures.

"Grapes are wonderful things," said a vine grower. "In Switzerland they have in the autumn a grape cure. Thousands of anaemic and nervous persons are benefited by this cure. Eating a huge bunch of grapes every ten minutes all day long, their cheeks soon bloom, they soon recover their health again."

"Fruit, all fruit, is medicinal. As a drink cure and as a blood purifier, what is there better than an apple? Did you ever hear of currant leaf poultices for gout? They are excellent, I assure you. And black currant jelly in water is a remedy for sore throat."

"Pineapples are good for diphtheria, strawberries for rheumatism, mulberry juice for fevers, elderberry for chills and lemon for colds, for headache and for bile."—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Port Orford Notes.

Ames Johnston, our Post Master and School Superintendent, and erstwhile teacher, has bought the merchandise in John R. Miller's store, taking possession last Saturday.

Operations on the oil well have been suspended temporarily, owing to the present money stringency; on that account Messrs. Freund and Spenser, sup't. and sec. respectively, have gone to their homes in Portland but will return and resume work soon.

MARRIED—Wednesday, Nov. 20, at the home of the bride, Mrs. Houghton of Mt. Neberg, Mr. James Russell officiating. In the evening the boys jumped into the "band wagon" drove to the residence and gave them the usual, but not to be despised, charivari.

H. P. Hancock, a mining man, came down from North Bend last week to prospect certain beach mines; but learning that the beaches are covered deep with gray sand, he concluded to postpone his investigations until the winter storms had lusted off the worthless sand; he left Port Orford next morning intending to examine the gravel bars near Mr. Divilbiss's on Sixes.

Dennis Cuniff has been engaged in surveying some beach mines near the mouth of Smith River for Dr. Theodore Heintz, of San Francisco. We are informed that the Dr. expects to establish a steam plant with a capacity of 25 horse power to be utilized in pumping water from the ocean for the purpose of washing the black sand. He has about 25 men employed. The Dr. is a thorough miner, of many years experience, and will doubtless succeed in his mining project.

James Arrance of Roseburg spent Sunday in Port Orford on his way to North Bend, having come in from his mine on the head of Rock creek near Iron mountain. He had some fine specimens of quartz which assay from 20 to 70 dollars per ton in gold, besides good values in copper. Although not much work has been done on their four claims yet, he says the ores show up in great quantities, and he is satisfied that they have a mine that will be very valuable. Its location is on the great Salmon mountain mineral belt, which, in places, shows coarse gold right up to the summits, but this belt is virtually unprospected. The belt lies equally in Coos and Curry—the divide being the boundary between them. Mr. Arrance says that Geo. Meservey and partner have discovered rich quartz from which coarse gold is taken on the Mert Miller claim joining his, and have jumped the claim. Big developments are expected next year.
