The Town Board last meeting night ordered that two more arc lights be installed, one on the road between the Shingle mill and Price's Ship Yard, the other at the top of the flight of stairs in front of the High School building, which will make a total of 14 big arc lights for the Town.

Next item of interest will be the "dog gone" dog tax, which will be due as soon as an installment of tags arrive. For a whole year the Marshall will terrify his "Bow-wow-ship," and all k-ix-ys not fortunate enough to wear a collar and tag will do well to take to the tall sycamores.

The latest is a diamond trust, organized in London to maintain prices. Counted by a reduced demand because of the American financial flurry, and by an increased supply of diamonds, dealers were face to face with the appalling probability of having their profits reduced. The trust has however succeeded in restricting the work in the African diamond mines to five days a week, the supply is reduced and we may confidently expect to hear that the price of diamonds has taken another three story flight skyward.
