Physical Training of Children.

Going to school is a very different matter from what it was a generation ago. The scope of education has been greatly broadened, and methods of imparting it have changed a good deal. Attending school now is much pleasanter than it used to be—though the boys and girls of the former days probably managed to have about as much fun. But teaching now is more scientific, more refined, and we doubt not accomplishes on the whole much better results. Not only are children instructed in more branches by means of text books, but manual training is becoming a part of the common school system, morals are looked after more, and children are educated not only in ways and means of physical culture and development, which is certainly very important and useful, but in their recreation, in what games to play and how to play them.

Physical culture and recreation naturally go together. Athletic games are means of both. Recently on Multnomah field was witnessed the enjoyable, inspiring sight of some 5,000 school children giving a public exhibition of their knowledge and skill in various physical exercise and games. It was a good thing to see because it helps to give assurance that these boys and girls will be better men and women, physically and otherwise, than their fathers and mothers had a chance to be.

The object of this species of education is ethical quite as much as physical. The children are not only trained to use their members and muscles lithely and in order, but also in their games to play on the square, to resort to no unfair tricks, to lose cheerfully, to win with modesty, and always to recognize the fact that merit deserves to win. It is sought in this instruction to teach children to play or engage in contests not only honestly, but without quarreling, with consideration and courtesy; not indeed without eager, youthful interest, yet like miniature ladies and gentlemen, not all hoydens and rowdies.

All of this, and more that we have not space here to express, make this training, and these exercises, extremely valuable. The old notion that getting an education consists only in learning what is in text books was altogether wrong; this is indeed but a minor part of a true, symmetrical education. This must include physical training and moral culture, a due regard for others, and a constant effort to develop the child along those lines which will result in best fitting him for the position in life that he can best fill, for the work he can best do.—Oregon Journal.

Paid For His Opinion.

On a tour in Canada Rudyard Kipling had a little disagreement with the landlord of the hotel at which he was staying, says London Tit-Bits. Just before leaving the hotel the famous author asked to see the proprietor, and upon that worthy appearing he was greeted thus: "I want to tell you that of all the hotels under the shining sun I have never seen one that for unmitigated, all round, unendurable discomfort could equal yours." When Kipling got his bill one item in it read, "To impudence, $3."

Diagnosed.

Young Featherhead soon after purchasing his elegant new touring car was taken with a swelling on the back of his neck. He went and consulted his physician about it.

"Doctor," he said, "are there such things as automobile diseases?"

"It is not unlikely," was the doctor's response. "At least automobile may develop tendencies to disease that lie dormant under ordinary conditions."

"Well, I wish you would look at that spot on the back of my neck and tell me if the excessive use of my motor car has anything to do with it."

The doctor complied.

"H'm!" he said gravely. "That looks as if it might be either a car bump or an automobile."

THINKS IT SAVED HIS LIFE

Lester M. Nelson, of Naples, Maine, says in a recent letter: "I have used Dr. King's New Discovery many years, for coughs and colds, and I think it saved my life. I have found it a reliable remedy for throat and lung complaints, and I would not more be without a bottle than I would be without food." For nearly forty years New Discovery has stood at the head of throat and lung remedies. As a preventive of pneumonia, and healer of weak lungs, it has no equal. BADLY SPRAINED ANKLE CURED

Three years ago our daughter sprained her ankle and had been suffering terribly for two days and nights—had not slept a minute. Mr. Stallings, of Butler, Tenn., told us of Chamberlain's Pain Balm. We went to the store that night and got a bottle of it and bathed her ankle two or three times and she went to sleep and had a good night's rest. The next morning she was much better and in a short time could walk around and had no more trouble with her ankle—E. M. Brunmit, Hampton, Tenn. 5 and 50 cent sizes for sale by C. Y. Lowe.
