THURSDAY..... July 9, 1908

NO STATE in the the Union is spreading more high class advertising matter than Oregon. The splendid booklets issued to present the claims of Yamhill county, Albany and Linn county, Grant's Pass, Roseburg, Medford, and Ashland, are superior to those issued by the commercial states of other states. Eastern Oregon is not being neglected, and the character of advertising cannot fail to have an advantageous effect. Coos county should fall in line and advertise. We have the natural resources, and especially is this true of the Coquille valley. We need a railroad and need it badly, and the best way to get one is to advertise and get the people here. Then there will be so much industry that the railroads cannot afford to stay out. We have the best farming country to be found anywhere; we can raise fruit in abundance. We have timber, minerals, and in fact everything that makes a country great. In fact, Coos county could almost support itself without anything from the outside world; but the outside world needs our products and we need people from the outside world. Let's get in and advertise and we will get everything that is coming.

Stomach troubles are very common in the summer time and you should not only be very careful about what you eat just now, but more than this, you should be careful not to allow your stomach to become disordered, and when the stomach goes wrong take Kodol. This is the best known preparation that is of benefit to the people today for dyspepsia or indigestion or any stomach trouble. Kodol digests all foods, is pleasant to take. It is sold by Bandon Drug Co.

Better Times in Sight.

On July 1st, the midyear day, nearly $200,000,000 was distributed to stockholders in railroads and other corporations, and this vast volume of money turned loose, it is predicted, will result in a great business revival, and in bringing about a full renewal of confidence, industrial activity and prosperity. This is no doubt to a large extent true. While the larger part of this immense amount of money will fall back into the same hands that disburse it—the Harrimans, Goulds, Rockefellers, Morgans, Ryans, and other like high financiers—a considerable fraction of it will find its way into diversified industrial channels, and will help much to start the second half of the year off well.

July 1st was also known as "re-employment day." The railroads put a great number of men to work, which, of itself, will go far to overcome the last vestiges of depression, and is besides an exceedingly encouraging sign of better, and, in fact, good times. For more than half a year the railroads have been employing as little labor as possible; everywhere they stopped work as far as they could, and threw tens of thousands of men out of employment, thus in large part contributing to and prolonging the "hard times." What the railroads have done in re-employment will be done by other great industrial concerns; besides, the harvest is just coming on, and except for the political bugbear the country would soon be in normal business shape again.

All that is necessary for good times is for the people generally to cheer up, get and hold on to a large stock of confidence, and go ahead with work and business. It is pessimists and cowards who give de-signing panic makers their opportunity.—Journal.

MAKING A DEW POND.

An Old Method of Securing Water, Even in a Drought.

There is still in England at least one wandering gang of men who will construct for the modern farmer a pool which in any situation in a sufficiently dry soil will always contain water—more in the heat of summer than during winter rains.

According to an account given by G. Hubbard in the Boston Post, this water is not derived from springs or rainfall and is speedily lost if even the smallest rivulet is allowed to flow into the pond.

The gang of dew pond makers commences operations by hollowing out the earth for a space far in excess of the apparent requirements of the proposed pond. They then thickly cover the whole of the hollow with a coating of dry straw. The straw in its turn is covered by a layer of well chosen, finely puddled clay, and the upper surface of the clay is then closely strewn with stones.

Care has been taken that the margin of the straw is effectively protected by clay. The pond will gradually become filled with water, the more rapidly the larger it is, even though no rain may fall. If such a structure is situated on the summit of a down during the warmth of a summer day the earth will have stored a considerable amount of heat, while the pond, protected from this heat by the non-conductivity of the straw, is at the same time chilled by the process of evaporation from the puddled clay.

The consequence is that during the night the moisture of the comparatively warm air is condensed on the surface of the cold clay. As the condensation during the night is in excess of the evaporation during the day, the pond becomes, night by night, gradually filled. Theoretically we may observe that during the day, the air being comparatively charged with moisture, evaporation is necessarily less than the precipitation during the night. In practice it is found that the pond will constantly yield a supply of the purest water.

The dew pond will cease to attract the dew if the layer of straw should get wet, as it then becomes of the same temperature as the surrounding earth and ceases to act as a nonconductor of heat. This practically always occurs if a spring is allowed to flow into the pond or if the layer of clay (technically called the crust) is pierced.

The Claw of the Devil.

In the middle ages people recognized witches and possessed persons by seeking on their bodies for what was called the claws of the devil. It was a more or less extensive part of the skin in which the subject was insensible to any touch or prick. The expert intrusted with this work would close the eyes of the subject and, armed with a sharp needle, prick here and there the different parts of the body. The sufferer was to answer with a cry to each prick, and the claw of the devil on a certain spot was recognized from the fact that he did not cry when this spot was examined.—"The Major Symptoms of Hysteria," by Pierre Janet.

Where the Shoe Pinched.

"If they don't quit making that child cry," sighed the flat dweller as his sobs echoed pitifully through the court, "I am going to apply to the board of health and have it stopped. There's a limit to everything." "Why the board of health?" asked her friend. "I should think you would apply to the Society For the Prevention of Cruelty to Children." "I am not thinking so much of him," acknowledged the flat dweller contritely, "as I am of my own health. His constant sobbing is getting on my nerves so that I can't sleep."—New York Press.

The Sun's Heat.

It is not impossible to express the marvelous power of the sun's heat, but we can admit without shame that it is impossible to comprehend it. The heat emitted by the sun in each second is equal to that which would result from the combustion of eleven quadrillions six hundred thousand milliards of tons of coal burning at the same time. This same heat would boil per hour seven hundred thousand millions of cubic miles of water at the temperature of ice. Attempt to understand this! As well might the ant attempt to drink the ocean!
