

Band Concerts at Marshfield

The Times has the following to say concerning the concerts given there recently by the Bandon Concert Band:

The concert given by the Bandon Concert Band at the Masonic Opera House last evening, was one of the most brilliant musical events ever held on Coos Bay. We are such spendthrifts with language that now and then when a little extra demand is made upon the dictionary for descriptive phrases there is a panic of words and we find ourselves bankrupts in expression. There is no desire to be extravagant in praise of last evening's affair but common courtesy requires the acknowledgment that the concert was a surprise and a delight. The program was a pretentious one for any musical organization but there was no evidence of amateurishness in the superb and splendid skill with which it was executed. The numbers with one or two exceptions were classical, requiring the technique and understanding of the trained musician to be rendered with the intelligence that marks music of the highest order. The audience was keenly sympathetic with the performers, but evidenced a musical knowledge and appreciation of the divine art that surmounted even their very evident friendly attitude. Emil B. Kausrud demonstrated his ability as a conductor by his perfect control of the musicians. He was at all times in certain command thus securing the dynamic effects of exquisite harmony in going from the most subtle nuances to the surge and fury of tremendous climaxes with all the gradations of phrasing and individual expression from the various instruments.

In a program of such uniform excellence, the only standard of superiority would be individual taste. Every number was received with most marked approval by the audience and the encores were numerous and enthusiastic. Capone's "Spring Blossoms," and Moskowsky's "Serenata" were both very enthusiastically received.

The cornet solo "Variations on Timp, Tramp," by Conductor Kausrud, roused the audience to a tremendous outburst of applause and he was compelled to respond to an encore.

The clarinet solo "Somnambula," by Clarence G. Adams, proved equally popular and received a demonstration that must have been flattering to the performer who was compelled to respond to an encore.

The concert in every way was one of the most successful ever given in Marshfield. The audience was surprisingly large, when the numerous other attractions were taken into consideration. It was a tribute both to the merits of the performance and a demonstration of good will and good feeling toward Bandon that was flattering to that lively city and complimentary to Coos Bay.

There will be another concert given at the Masonic Opera House tonight with an entire change of program. The house should be crowded.

Sale Bill Before the War

The following unique sale bill was recently discovered at Wellsville, Mo., and gives an idea of the change that 58 years has wrought.
