Taft will Meet Bryan

Chicago, Sept. 18—It was announced at Republican headquarters here that it has been decided to charter a special train to bring Taft here on the night of October 7th or the waterways convention to prove that he is not afraid to meet Bryan and put to rest claims and assertions to that effect.

Taft had made an engagement to speak on that afternoon at Galesburg, Ill., at the semi-centennial of the Lincoln-Douglas debate. It was not believed that he could reach Chicago in time for the banquet, and that is the cause given at his headquarters for his original declination of the invitation.

This has put new life into the arrangements for the banquet, and now that it seems certain that both the Republican and Democratic candidates will be present new efforts to bring the candidates of all parties here will be made.

Oregon's Greatest Fair Closed

Salem, Or. Sept. 18–Oregon's greatest state fair is nearing its close this afternoon. Race records have been broken and horse lovers have had their tastes fully satisfied. It has surpassed any fair of a similar nature ever held in the West. Favorable weather did much for the heavy attendance, but to President Matlock, Secretary Welch and the entire board is due the credit for making the fair a success after the crowd reached the grounds.

No one who visited the 1908 fai was disappointed and many were greatly and pleasantly surprised Every feature has been sucessful. The board will endeavor to make the fair next year still more of a success and assist it along lines that have shown need for most improvement.

ATTACKED BY WHALES.

Cases Where Ships Have Been Rammed by These Monsters.

While cruising in the south seas the whaler Essex on Nov. 20, 1820, was furiously attacked by a cow sperm whale, supposed to have been the mother of a calf which had just been harpooned. The whale had not been wounded herself, and her attack was very determined. At her first rush she passed under the Essex and carried away a great length of her false keel. Then, coming to the surface a considerable distance away, she appeared to take bearings and deliberately charged the vessel again, ramming her with such violence that she stove in the bows, while the ship rolled so heavily that the captain thought she must be dismasted. The case is memorable because the crew had to abandon the vessel, and one boat was never heard of again.

A more singular instance of a whale attacking a vessel occurred in 1895. The singularity lies in the fact that in the case of the Handa Isle the attack was entirely unprovoked. This vessel, a brigantine of 260 tons, was on her way to Sydney with a cargo of timber. On Aug. 24, about noon, a couple of sperm whales arose very close to the vessel, and while the crew watched them "sporting" across her bows the pair suddenly slewed around and came straight for her. One thought better of it and dived below the Handa Isle. The other struck her fair and square on her beam, crushing in her timbers. Having rammed the ship in this resolute fashion, the whale sheered off, terribly damaged about the head, and presently sank, tail first.

Fortunately there were some packages of rawhides on board, and the crew were able to keep the vessel afloat until a rough and ready collision mat had been fashioned out of these and drawn over the leak.—Bailey's Magazine.

A DIFFICULT BATH.

Exciting Time In the Dead Sea and the River Jordan.

It is well known that the waters of the Dead sea are much heavier than those of the ocean. This is due to the great amount of salt held in solution. A few years ago Mr. (now Sir) Gray Hill of England made a trial of swimming in the sea and then in the Jordan to compare the two. He tells the result in his book, "With the Bedouins:"

Many tourists while at Jericho bathe in the Dead sea and the Jordan, and for very shame I could not pass by without doing so. But my experience was peculiar. I had with me one of the Jericho sheiks and one of the muleteers, and we rode first to the Dead sea. Its waters are generally perfectly still and of a splendid blue color, but now, owing to the storm, they were very rough, the waves ran high and for some 200 yards from the shore were of an ugly brown.

I looked askance at it as I undressed, but felt bound to go in. The waves very promptly knocked me down and filled my mouth, nose and eyes with their strong brine. Again I tried and again, picking up one after another of the bare branches of trees which are carried down by the Jordan and washed on to the shores of this strange lake, with which I tried to steady myself as I walked in. But the force of the waves, aided by the great floating power of the water, twisted the branches out of my hands and knocked me down time after time until, feeling that I had done enough for principle, I acknowledged that the victory did not lie on my side and scrambled out, smarting most unpleasantly.

Then we galloped off to the Jordan, where I thought I should succeed better. So I cast about for a suitable place to jump in, for I did not like to crawl in ignominiously at the pilgrims' bathing place, near which we were and which would have been the wisest course to adopt. I wanted to take a header. So, procuring a long stick, I ascended the stream a little and made sure by sounding with it of a deep spot under an overhanging tree.

In I plunged, intending to swim down to the regular bathing place, where I knew there must be a good bottom for getting out. Down I came with the fast flowing yellow flood, striking out in the fullest enjoyment.

But when I was just about to put my foot to the ground I was brought up sharp with a tremendous blow on my right breast. If it had struck me on the heart it would, I think, have killed me on the spot. I had come down on to the end of a stake pointing up stream and driven in to mark the upper boundary of the bathing place, but which was hidden, owing to the rains having raised the surface of the river. I had some difficulty in crawling out again and was black and blue in the chest for a month afterward. There is nothing like a little experience to teach one wisdom.
