Roosevelt "Out of a Job."

The sensation that must be experienced by a man who takes a sudden drop from the Presidency to private life is something beyond the power of the ordinary person to imagine. For seven long years a man stood at the head of the greatest nation on earth, having at his beck and call the great men of the country and having always at his service scores of secretaries, clerks and stenographers. Nearly 80,000,000 of people were ready to shout themselves hoarse if he should come within sight of them. Almost all men with polftical ambitions strove to please him in order that they might win his favor. But at the end of his seven years of power and strenuous activity he suddenly dropped to life, shorn of all power other than that of his own individual strength of mind and body, and displaced in public attention by another who had as suddenly arisen to rulership. One day a man rode in a government carriage with a bodyguard of secret service men about him; the next day he rode in a street car, paid his nickel the same as everybody else, and hung onto straps because he could not get a seat. The change was not one in outward appearance only. One day the man had upon his mind all the varied and important responsiblities of government. The next day he was care free, except for his own limited private business affairs. For seven years his mind has been intensely active in solving the multitude of problems that arose from day to day. In an hour the entire burden was lifted and he had no longer a need to give special attention to matters of statecraft. He could go to the quiet of his room and write an article for a magazine but how different is this from the tense excitement that accompanies the constant labor of handling numerous momentuous problems involving millions of dollars, the happiness of multitude and perhaps the peace of nations. The mind thus relieved of all this burden, must feel, relatively speaking, unoccupied, out of his element, lonely and dissatisfied with his inactivity.

Men who become presidents are always active men, who are accustomed to take a prominent part in public affairs. Like men who have built up a successful private business, they find employment in hard work and cannot willingly be idle. The head of a great industrial enterprise is never ready to lay down the reins and retire to quiet life. To cease to work is contrary to his nature. So it is with the man who has labored in public service until he has reached the presidency and served his term in that high office. It is not surprising, therefore, that men who have been presidents do not generally live long after retiring to private life, for they are accustomed to mental activity and the excitement of meeting and solving public questions. To stop work suddenly is a violation of the laws of their natures, and very naturally they do not thrive on comparative idleness.

Ex-President Roosevelt has chosen wisely in determining to go to Africa on a hunting trip. If he should remain here he would find himself practically out of employment and with little to occupy a mind as active as his. In the new and strange scenes of an African jungle and in the dangers of the chase for wild animals of the tropics, he will find excitement enough to keep his mind active. A tour of the world will afford useful and interesting employment, with himself as the center of attention wherever he goes. If he were to remain at home he would be almost lost from view while the new President occupies the center of the stage. No man of energy and industry should be "out of a job," and Roosevelt does not intend to be caught in that undesirable position.—Oregonion.

Obituary

Mrs. Winnfred Gaffey was born in County Roscommon, Ireland, in the year 1854. Her maiden name was O'Farrel. She came to America at the age of 18, was married to Patrick Gaffey in the state of New Jersey at the age of 25. To this union were born seven children, five sons and two daughters. The father and two children, a son and daughter, passed to the great beyond a number of years ago. One daughter and four sons are left to mourn the loss of as good, kind and unselfish a mother as children ever possessed.

She passed away at Coquille March 11, 1909, aged 65 years and seven months, after an illness of ten weeks. Everything that loving hands and aching hearts could do to make her last days on earth comfortable was done, and her demise has cast a gloom on the community in which she lived. The writer heard a little child of eight years say, "Take these flowers to Mrs. Gaffey's funeral. I do not want to go I loved her so If it were some one else it would be different, but I want to remember her as standing in the door as I used to see her."

Those left to mourn her loss are Mrs. Katherine McGee, Thos. William, John and Bernard Caffey, all reisdents of Coquille.

The remains were laid to rest in the Marshfield cemetery on Sunday, March 14, beside her husband who preceded her in the year 1901. May the dear soul rest in peace. She leaves a host of friends to mour her loss, besides her family who have the sympathy of the entire community. M. M. J.

Better Up-River Service

H. W. Skinner, the Marsfield agent for the Alliance, was in Myrtle Point yesterday on business. He states that arrangements have been made for a coverd scow for the delivery of Myrtle Point freight from Coquille by the Echo. This will keep goods undet cover and substitute for a covered wharf, giving better satisfaction to local merchants. The new boat to be built by the Alliance people Mr. Skinner thinks will settle the Coquille freight business by giving a thoroughly satisfactory service. The new boat is to be twin screw which will help it in crossing the bars and will have a speed of thirteen knots an hour, which should give the people of this valley as good service as that given to any other locality. Commenting on the situation, the Marshfield news says: "Under these conditions it will be a hard matter for the S. P. to freeze out the Alliance. The old favorite has always acted square with her patrons, and her rates were always reasonable,—even when she was the only boat on the Portland route. In view of the fact that the S. P. a short time ago, intimated to the Alliance that the freight rate was to low, Coos county merchants should easily be able to figure out what will happen if the steamer is driven off the route." —Myrtle Point Enterprise.

Prehistoric City Rises in Desert

Los Angeles, Cal, March 16—In the San Jacinto Mountains, near the edge of the Coachella Valley, B. P. Bond of Long Beach, has just made California's most important archaelogical discovery, and one that vill be of worldwide interest. While rambling up from his desert land claim, he found the ruins of a prehistoric city containing from 700 to 1000 well preserved stone houses. Evidences of well-paved streets, strange earthenware of fine type scattered about and the general aspect of the place shows that it was no mean community, but savored of civilization.

Bond arrived here today and after conferring with Chas. F. Cummis and other scientists, arranged to place accurate information concerning his remarkable find before the Smithsonian Institute. He already has assurance by wire that an immediate and thorough exploration will be conducted from Washington and has been asked in the meantime not to divulge the exact location of the ruins, lest relic hunters and others strip them of probable valuables He states the silent city lies within 15 miles of Indio and not over five mlles from the old Los Angeles-Yuma road.

Well Known Couple Wed

T. J. Lewis, former coroner of Coos county and one of the best known residents of Marshfield, and Mrs. C. D. McFarlin, widow of the late well-known cran-berry rancher on North Inlet, were quietly married at Vancouver, Wash., a few days ago. The marriage of the well-known couple was a great surprise to their numerous friends on Coos Bay. The worthy couple reached here today on the Breakwater.

Mrs. McFarlin had been visiting in Portland and other northern points. Mr. Lewis went to Portland a week ago presumably to straighten out some matters connected with the estate in Wales to which he recently had fallen heir. They met and talked it over, and finally decided to marry at once instead of waiting for a year or so as they had originally planned.

Mr. Lewis says that as soon as he can straighten out his affairs he and Mrs. Lewis and his daughter, Miss Muriel. who has been attending school in California, will leave for Wales to establish his claim to the inheritance there.

Much Ado About Nothing

Fruitvale, Cal., March 16.—An immense Easter bonnet, not her own, caused a woman to miss her train, blockaded the entryway of a street car, and was only removed by the knife of the motorman of the car. All of this came about when a small boy with a huge box placed it in an aisle of the car. No trouble came until a woman passenger attempted to get by the handbox and discovered that it could not be moved. The woman appealed to the conductor, declaring that she was in haste to make a train.

He unfeelingly advised her to jump over the obstacle, but she indignantly refused to attempt the feat. Finally the motormen was appealed to and he cut the Gordian knot by severing the strings about the handbox. When the millinery creation which it had contained was removed the box was kicked out of the way. Released, the woman set out in frantic pursuit of her train, while the box proceeded to deliver the hat without its handbox.
