The Volatarian Method

David Starr Jordan, president of Stanford, reproduces in a little book, with some enlargement, an article which is published in the Popular Science Monthly in August, 1888. It is an application of the doctrine and system of the Octrol in France to Protective Tariff conditions in the United States. It is a mighty good piece of satire. The octrol, as everybody knows, is a government grant or privilege given to some company or person; especially a trade monoply thus conferred. Notably in France, and to an extent in other European countries, it is a tax levied at the gates of a city on articles introduced for consumption. Jordan's little book is a pretty story, telling how people get rich by taxing each other. But there were unprotected industries, and somehow there were persons—many of them—who got no profit out of the system.

The story reminds one of Voltaire's method of treatment of like qnestions, of which, however. it is no imitation. The advantages obtained by one class and another are passed on to the lowliest class, who can pass them no further.

Two general lessons, writes Dr. Jordan in his introductions, may be drawn from this record. "The first, that history repeats itself, if it be real history. not a succession of unrelated incidents. The second, that the national wealth may be enhanced by taking money from the hands of the poor, who waste it (the reason why they are poor) and putting it into the hands of the rich and poweiful, who know how to make money work." Again "It is a well-attested fact that prosperity will always follow when property can be trasferred in a lawful and orderly manner fro n the many who do not know what to do with it to the few who know how to use it."

There is equal mixture of truth and irony here. For Dr. Jordan is a fighter against privilege and for democracy. His idea is that it is not the function of society to establish economic government. but to educate the people. Yet nobody knows better than he how difficult and arduous the problem is.—Oregonian.

Empties Gun at Brother

Spokane, Wash, April 12—Because his brother would not close a door through which a draught blew that annoyed him, O. A. Pahl, a painter 30 years old, emptied six chambers of his 32 caliber revolver at W. H. Pahl, a surveyor, 24 years old, two bullets taking effect. One bullet penetrated the jaw, passing out at the cheek and the other clipped off the end of one thumb.

The widowed mother of the boys interfered to prevent further assault by the older brother, who was reloading to renew his attack.

W. H. Pahl was arrested and placed under $1000 bond, and the other is held under surveillance in the hospital as a witness.

Widow Has No Emotion

Tacoma, Wash, April 12—Standing beside the casket containing the body of the husband who had lost his life in his endeavor to find her while she remained in hiding in New York, Mrs. Anna M. Nelson, widow of the ex-switchman, Andrew P. Nelson, displayed not the slightest emotion. Never once during the impressive funeral service did the woman shed a tear. She did not even bow her head in prayer. She gazed for the last time on the face of her husband before the casket was closed without losing composure. Later when she summoned newspaper men about her in her attorney's office for a final interview, she only once exhibited emotion. This was when she was asked what kind of a time she had had in New York.

"I left my husband because like every woman who deserts her home I wanted freedom. We were not suited to each other. Both of us were wilful and I never was made to bow to any man's will. When we were married and I promised to obey him, I told the blackest lie a woman ever told. There were a good many fine points about my husband, which cannot be forgotten, but when he was in one of his ugly moods I feared him. The night after we were married he told me he had had another wife and had shot her three times, but that none of the shots proved fatal. He was cleared under the unwritten law. I do not know what I shall do, but I do not want to be interviewed again."

Open Big Camp

A logging industry, that promises much for the development of this section of the country will soon be opened up at the Carolina settlement about 22 miles up the South Fork river. The camp is being installed by E. H. Chaney & Co., members of the company coming here from the lumbering section of Michigan. The company has received what is undoubtedly the largest donkey engine ever shipped to this section which is being transported to the camp this week. Two other large engines are on the way and will be installed as rapidly as possible. The logging operations will open on the Arnold tract and the company is said to have an abundance of fine timber under their control that will be logged off by them. A crew of about twenty-five men will be put on at an early date and this number will be increased to 50 or 75 as soon as the other engines are received and placed on the ground.

The company at present has a force of men engaged in transporting machinery to the site of the new camp and is building bunk houses and otherwise preparing for the opening up of the work. It is understood that the company expects to market its output of logs for the present.—Enterprise.
