

Extract From Address on Lincoln

Following are a few extracts from Rev. Eddy's address on Lincoln delivered in the Bandon opera house on Decoration day:

One hundred years ago a son was born to good-natured, shiftless Tom Lincoln in an exceedingly rude log cabin in Hardin county, Kentucky. No portentous auguries heralded the future greatness of the inmate of that cradle. Commiseration may indeed have tinged the comment of neighbors if his advent caused any ripple of excitement whatever. Yet on the twelfth of last February some thousands of people sought out the rotting ruins of that primitive cabin and the president of the United States laid the corner stone for an edifice of granite to cost one hundred thousand dollars or more, which shall enclose and so far as possible protect from the gnawing teeth of time that humble abode and in his address, President Roosevelt, an historian of no mean repute ranked the man who came from that rude birth place as one of the two greatest Americans, one of the two or three greatest men of the Nineteenth century and as one of the greatest men in the world's history.

We can only pause to note this man Lincoln on a few of the great occasions which marked his political career as a national figure. First see him in the Lincoln-Douglas debates. It is in these debates that he attracts the attention of the nation, chiefly, it must be admitted because of the fame of the opponent. Douglas, then at the height of his fame, witty, eloquent, a master of political craft, was considered the peer of any man in public life. That "Abe" Lincoln could meet the "Little Giant" except to his own undoing was not thought possible. Yet Douglas discovered, probably more to his own surprise than to that of his fellows that in this unknown, uncultured opponent he had met more than his match. It was indeed a strange figure of a man that met Douglas on the rude bustings; an uncouth giant of a man, strangely touched with genius. The one man who understood the portents of the times. As we look back there is something almost pathetic in the brave going forth of Douglas to meet a man of destiny. It was in the acceptance of the nomination for the senate as the opponent of Douglas that Lincoln made his famous declaration that a "house divided against itself cannot stand. I believe that the government cannot endure permanently half slave and half free." He made this statement to the consternation of his friends but his prophetic foresight was soon justified by the swift logic of events. It made him the one man to whom the nation could turn in the hour of decision. The public attention attracted by the debates with Douglas brought to Lincoln numerous invitations to deliver political addresses in different parts of the country. Salient among them stands the address delivered at Cooper's Union in New York City. Lincoln was then an unknown quantity to the East. They wondered what manner of man this strange, rude barbarian was who loomed so large suddenly out of the obscurity of the western frontier. Like Caesar he came and saw and conquered, for those who came to jeer went forth to praise. Here at last appeared a man who dared face squarely an issue that had been long evaded. The day of masterly evasion was passed and the time for the diplomatic tricksters to be replaced by the man of moral courage was at hand and lo! the man appeared. "Let us have faith that right makes right, and in that faith let us to the end dare to do our duty as we understand it" was the cry upon his lips."

Letter to the Public

Bandon June 7, 1909.—Editor RE-CORDER.—A smart man gave the advice: "In time of peace, prepare for war."

Fortunately the killing of people, the destroying of property, the laying waste of our fertile countries, the "glorious" practice of making widows and orphans, sooner or later, will and must come to an end. In former years, each man was a law unto himself, so far as his power reached, he could settle his own disputes, such self help which then seemed to be the glory of men, has been stopped and disputes are now settled through our courts, so will heroes of battlefields and murderers of the innocent be done away with, and out of such change will spring forward a movement opposed to vandalism, murders and destroyers and become a class of people who will say "Love thy neighbor as thyself" as "Do unto others as you would that others should do unto you." Then the hired soldier, paid by industries will beat his sword into a plow share and his spear into a pruning hook. Instead of a murderer, legalized, he will become a producer to advance the welfare of his fellow man.

In a recent issue of the RE-CORDER I noticed a clipping from the Myrtle Point Enterprise on the subject: "Does Strawberry Culture Pay," written by Mr. Henry Stewart post master of that town. Those who have not read the article have lost much valuable information which will bring future success to men of industry and men of brain and brawn.

How can one acre of land held by most people to be worth less than fifty dollars per acre, produce more than most of the farmers are getting from their high priced bottom land? Simply because the brain of a man developed this low priced land to perfection, until he realizes $266 rent for it in a single season. We have thousands of acres in Coos county which would bring as great returns if properly developed.

"But I hear some one say: 'If we all use our land for such purpose who will buy the berries? Just the question I wanted you to ask.

We have heard that Coos county is a dairy country, well let us see. Our best soil on low lands so far has produced enough to keep one cow the year around. The cow brings in a return of from $55 to $80. Some will say they made more. I hope so, possibly they made $100 but the bench land produces $266 per acre, and we must then see how all this land can be utilized to a profit, and we see that as the dairymen without a creamery would be able to accomplish little, neither can we fruit growers without a cannery reach the zenith of our possibilities, and there should be, not only one cannery as there could easily be two fruit canneries where we now have one creamery, and they would bring in the greatest season of prosperity ever known to this country, not only to a few but to hundreds who are now complaining of dull times.

We want railroads and talk of the great advantages of them but we never stop to think of the wastefulness of our manufacturers with raw material. Let us take the saw mills, more timber is wasted than is made use of. Such conditions will soon have to stop.

Hood River has the reputation of being the richest apple growing country, let us win the name of being the greatest fruit and vegetable producers. We can and we should do so.

Dr. Rossiter has moved his residence and office to the old Panter residence next door to the Bijou theater where he will be found night and day.

Humor and Philosophy
By DUNCAN M. SMITH

PERT PARAGRAPHS.

Probably fortune favors the brave because being favored of fortune makes a man brave.

Discipline is good for anybody, which is tantamount to saying it is what everybody squirms under.

The boy who doesn't like to wash his face grows into the man who has to have a patient and long suffering wife in order to keep him presentable.

The man who has no friends either has too much or too little money.

Anybody is penitent once he is convinced that he can't make good in his sinful career.

The Gala Day.
Hip, hurrah!
The day's at hand
When
Attwart
The blooming land
Every idiot
In a frenzy
Of delight
Will arise
And work
By rule
As a blooming
April fool.
April first
Will be his case,
And
You'll find him
There in place,
Innocent
And free of guile,
Kicking at
A battered tile
That was loaded
With a brick
By
Your college chum
Sam Slick.
Going on
A goose chase wild
Like a simple
Little child,
Running blithely
Here and there
For an anger
That is square
Or perhaps
To bring
Your wife
A left handed
Carving knife.
Oh, the blooming
April fool!
Did he never
Go to school?

No Use For It.
"She certainly lacks tact."
"Oh, but she is clever enough to know it."
"Well, why doesn't she cultivate it?"
"Says she does not need it; has a substitute."
"I wonder what it is."
"Just plain money."

Untouched.
"How are your New Year's resolutions?"
"In fine shape."
"None broken?"
"Guess not. How could they be? I haven't used them yet."

Cheaper.
"Do you have an auto?"
"No; I have no time for it."
"Indeed! I did not know that you were working so hard."
"It isn't that. You see, all my friends have autos."

Was He?
"I am looking for the boss."
"He isn't in; he is away from home."
"I just wanted to know if he will sign this petition, madam?"
"No, he won't."

Unhappy Medium.
"Will he succeed as a humorist?"
"No; he just misses success."
"Not quite up to the mark?"
"No; he is not quite bad enough to be good."

Came In Naturally.
"Who is the pompous one?"
"Who but the ice man?"
"I suppose he is rolling in wealth."
"Well, he has a cool million."

More Practical.
"Everybody says she threw herself at his head."
"Did she?"
"No; at his pocketbook."

Getting Ready.
"Do you suppose the women could handle the Australian ballot?"
"Sure. Aren't they practicing now on the kangaroo walk?"

Double Sale.
The highest bidder took it in.
The junk was secondhand and old.
He found on looking at the prize
He was the one who had been sold.
