

Yakima Reds Give Old Time War Dance

North Yakima, Wash., Sept. 22—Half a hundred Nez Perce Indians who have been picking hops in the valley donned regalia and war paint Sunday, and gave the best exhibition of Indian dancing which has been seen here in some years, before a crowd of several thousand people, at Sumach Park. In the party were four authentic Indian War veterans, Ha-mene Mox-Mox, which means Yellow Wolf, made an address to the people, telling something of the wars in which he fought and giving to the interpreter to hold, where all might see, the weapon he had carried through Chief Joseph's battles. It was not the regulation tomahawk, but a ball of skin filled with sand or small pebbles attached with a thong to a short handle. When Joseph at last surrendered, Ha-mene Mox-Mox concealed his rifle and his war club beneath his blanket and escaped. Wandering about aimlessly with a small band of his tribe, he was captured by the Sioux. After his escape from them he returned to the agency firmly expecting to meet death for his insubordination.

Perhaps the most interesting warrior in the group was Two Moons, a tiny, little, old man, in a plaid calico overshirt with a chain of gold beads about his neck. He carried the old-fashioned carbine he had used in the Nez Perce War of 1877, and never once during the afternoon did he lay it down. Two Moons wore no war bonnet, but his gray hair and breast were smeared with red clay, and his scores of years did not prevent his taking a turn in the dance.

Chief Tippe-la nah Fla-siveh, whose English name is Come-Down, was very young at the time of the outbreak. His profile is exactly like that of the Indian who used to be on the penny.

F-lah-weh-ma, or About Asleep was sufficiently alert to discredit his name. As master of ceremonies he carried a long staff wound with beaver skin. About Asleep is known as David Williams. In the last battle before Joseph's surrender he saw his father killed, his mother shot down, and he himself, a lad of 14, escaped, only to be captured by the Sioux. In the parade to the grounds, he rode a white horse with a splash of red paint on its breast to symbolize the horse which through mortally wounded, carried the lad safely out of the battle.

The costume display was the extreme of richness, according to the Indian styles. Beautifully embroidered velvet suits, beaded vests, and sandals of wonderful workmanship and quaint and curious ornaments made a picture full of variety and color. Many of the young squaws wore velvet, the colored selva being left on to make a bright band around the bottom of the skirt. The old squaws sat at the side in charge of the children, save for the two little royal boys who had diminutive warbonnets of their own and danced as persistently and sedately as any one.

GOOD FOR BILIOUSNESS

Help One Another

The Times has always held fast to the principle that there is no occasion for dissension between the sections and cities of Coos county or the individuals of the communities. The right way for the people to do at all times is to discourage such dissension and not encourage it. Where individuals err and indulge in personal prejudice and spleen it should not be charged up to an entire community. Every city and community and individual in Coos county should stand shoulder to shoulder in support of every measure that is for the advancement and development of any section of Coos county. They should see that what means prosperity and growth for one town means the same thing for another. All towns in the county should strive to cultivate and foster this spirit of mutual self-help. They should help one another to forward every movement which means advancement for any portion of the county. By the same token all the people should discourage everything which retards advancement. Individual knocking, knocking one another is one of the things that retards.

Let us discourage the knocking habit, therefore; and do it, not by answering a knock with a criticism but on the contrary by answering it with silence, or better still, by meeting every knock with a boost. Bitterness and unkindly feeling cannot exist when kindness and friendliness meet them face to face. Instead of crying "Villain" we should disarm villainy with justice. Let it not be every fellow for himself and the devil take the hindmost, but let us push forward together, upholding and assisting one another. Unless this spirit can prevail, rocks and not railways will be the harvest of the future.—Coos Bay Times.

A SPRAINED ANKLE

As usually treated a sprained ankle will disable the injured person for a month or more, but by applying Chamberlain's Liniment and observing the directions with each bottle faithfully, a cure may, in most cases, be effected in less than one week's time. This liniment is a most remarkable preparation; try it for a sprain or bruise, or when laid up with chronic or muscular rheumatism and you are certain to be delighted with the prompt relief which it affords. ### Land to Rough to be Surveyed Seattle, Sept. 20—Thirty miles of the boundary line between Alaska and Canada lying in a region about 80 miles north of Mount St. Elias, probably never will be surveyed, according to the men engaged in the boundary survey work.

David W. Eaton, head of the first party to return to the United States at the close of the season, arrived on the steamer Jefferson from the north today. He will remain here until the arrival of the chief, Thomas Rigg Jr., and will then proceed with Riggs to Washington.

"Mr. Riggs had under his charge 35 men divided into five parties," said Eaton. "My party, as did the others, operated on the 141 meridian, covering that part of the line from where the meridian crosses it in the White River Valley to the northward, to as far south as the ice fields would permit.

"These ice fields are located about 80 miles north of Mount St. Elias, and embrace 30 miles of the line. The task of surveying this region is now held to be an impracticable one, for it is an impenetrable solitude of high peaks, capped with glaciers which have baffled the efforts of the hardest and most indefatigable surveyors.

"The boundary line so far has been established from the Portland canal to where the 141st meridian crosses the Yukon River. Each American party works in conjunction with a Canadian party."

WHY DRUGGISTS RECOMMEND CHAMBERLAIN'S COLIC, CHOLERA AND DIARRHOEA REMEDY

Mr. Frank P. Hanrahan, a prominent druggist of Portsmouth, Va., says: "For the past six years I have sold and recommended Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. It is a great remedy and one of the best patent medicines on the market. I handle some others for the same purposes that pay me a larger profit, but this remedy is so sure to affect a cure, and my customer so certain to appreciate my recommending it to him, that I give it the preference." ## Working Women

A law in Illinois prohibits wage earning women from toiling more than 10 hours per day for their employers. The measure was passed by the last legislature of that state. The Manufacturers' association is endeavoring to have the law declared unconstitutional. A court has granted a temporary injunction and the case is pending. The Manufacturers' association urges unconstitutionality, on the ground that wage earning women should have the privilege, if they so desire, of toiling more than 10 hours a day.

It does not appear as to whether or not any of the wage earning women of Illinois are concerned in the effort to have the law nullified. The fact that the suit is brought by the Manufacturers' association rather than by the women has some significance. That the owners of Illinois factories should seek to secure for women the right to toil more than 10 hours at a machine, and that they do so solely in the interest of the women is a new and unexpected philanthropy, but one in which most of the great Missourian public will have to be shown.

It is hardly likely that wage earning women desire the law made void. Even if they do there is question as to whether they should realize their wish. Something is due a national physical standard. Most women ultimately become mothers. Ten hours a day at a machine or otherwise is strain enough to break down the vigor, destroy the nerves and impair the digestion of even strong women. It is a swifter destruction of the frail. When they have toiled to hours it is time for them to rest. In the interest of the physical well-being of the generation they are to mother it is essential for them to rest. They owe it to the public and the race to seek rest after 10 hours of toil, and the public and the race owes it to them to see that their social condition is such that there will be food and rest for any woman who has toiled 10 hours.

It is a mighty close approach to a national shame that a cold blooded industrial organization should be in court clamoring that women should be able to toil not only 10 hours, but longer in order to earn food and shelter.—Journal.

Arctic Explorer Finds Queer Tribe

San Francisco Sept. 21—On board the whaler Jeanette, which arrived in this port yesterday heavily laden with furs, blubber and tales of the frozen north, was J. W. Bower, an Arctic explorer, who reports the discovery of a new tribe of people never before seen by the eyes of a white man. This new tribe of Eskimos, according to Bower, live on a point in Prince Albert Land.

Bower left this port two years ago on board the ship James Drummond and has spent the intervening time wandering about among the Eskimos. Unlike the usual type of Eskimo, the newly discovered natives, who call themselves Nun a cotics, are very tall and look like North American Indians. The explorer was cordially welcomed by the strange tribesmen and procured many rich furs from them.

From the town of Nunacotics, Bower proceeded farther north, where he discovered immense copper deposits. On this trip he lost an eye through the bite of a spider.

This was not the end of Bower's troubles, for after the eyeball was removed by the crude surgery of an Eskimo, the schooner used by the party was wrecked and the adventurers had to walk 130 miles to Point Barrow, where they were picked up by the Jeanette.
