Carl Garoutte returned Friday from Lane county where he and Mrs. Garoutte have been spending the winter. Mrs. G. will not return for a couple of weeks yet, as she is waiting for the roads to get better over the mountains.

Having purchased the Racket Store we respectfully solicit the patronage of all the old customers as well as the general public and as sure you the same courteous treatment as heretofore. We shall strive to keep abreast of the times and keep a first class stock in our line it D. W. Carpenter, Prop.

The hearing of Messrs. Taylor and Christiansch, the two members of the Coos Bay Life Saving crew, who were suspended sometime ago on the charge of looting wreckage from the wrecked Czarina, was completed by Captain DeOtte. It is understood the evidence and Captain DeOtte's recommendations have to go to Washington before a decision is announced.

Sheriff Gage of Coos county and City Marshal Jack Carter of Marshfield were both ushered into the fold of the lowly Nazarene at the Dan Shannon meetings in Marshfield last Sunday evening. Sheriff Gage, after he had decided for Christ, went out of the tabernacle and arrested a man for selling liquor on Sunday, says the Coos Bay Times.

That the Bandon Concert Band is becoming famous over the country is getting more and more evident from the various communications that the president and leader are getting. Only last week Prof. Kausrud received a communication from Colby Springs Kans., a famous summer resort, wanting him to come there to lead a large band this summer.

Col. R. H. Rosa and wife returned on the Elizabeth from California where they had been spending a few weeks.

During the past three years this lodge has increased from 64 members to 100 members in good standing, placing them in the front rank of village K. of P. lodges in the state. "Billie" Wakefield, well known in Bandon was present and assisted in the work.

Rev. Father Curley, who was formerly pastor of the Catholic church here and at North Bend, has returned to the latter city after a trip to Portland. He had intended making a change and taking a church out in the Willamette valley but it is announced that the Archbishop has changed his mind about giving him another charge, and he will remain on the bay and continue in charge of the North Bend parish.

You want the Normal School question separated from politics. That is what the Initiative Bill does for Monmouth. This is your opportunity to keep it always separate. The state educates her lawyers, farmers, doctors, pharmacists, etc., why not her teachers. We must have schools. The better trained the teacher, the better school and more intelligent service the child gets. Vote, Yes, for Monmouth. 11-4t

A housewife who has given it a trial recommends a lotion of equal parts of turpentine, ammonia and raw linseed oil as a ready means of relief from frost-bitten feet and chilblains. The liniment should be applied three or four times a day, as conditions seem to demand.

Rotation as a principle of soil culture is not only good for the field crops, but for those raised in the garden patch as well. Such rotation not only rests the soil, but tends to check the development of fungous and other pests which are likely to infest the ground if the same crop is produced on the same plot year after year.

There are many farmers who could have or carry out no more practical New Year's resolution than the purchase and use of a good manure spreader. It will not only mean fewer blisters and callouses on the hands through freedom from forking the stuff off the wagon, but will likewise mean a great many dollars more in pocket as a result of a more economical handling of the farm fertilizers and from realizing a larger per cent of their value in increased crop returns.

As a result of three years of careful testing in the seeding of oats at the Illinois experiment station it has been found that when drilled oats produce on an average 5.3 bushels per acre more than when sown broadcast in the common siphed fashion. The increased yield is attributed to more uniform germination and stand and more even growth and maturity. It was also found in this connection that clover drilled with oats seemed much better able to withstand the dry weather just following harvest.

If there is any ground for the statement alleged that many a farmer in dairy sections is selling his butter fat at 50 to 55 cents per pound and buying butter—beef suet and cottonseed oil, etc.—at 10 to 20 cents a pound to grease his pancakes with very little enthusiasm will be aroused on his behalf on the part of the day laborer who is buying butter or some other kind of fat all of the time and has some to sell. Country people should use creamery butter or go without if they expect to win public favor in their war on the oleomargarine trust.

A lot of feeders should realize more fully than they seem to the difference in revenue between the scrub, ill favored steer that has a hard time fetching $5 per hundred weight on the market and the quickly grown, blocky Hereford, Angus or Shorthorn grade that weighs 1,200 to 1,450 pounds and brings $8.50 per hundred weight. The chances are that the scrub, pound for pound, has cost more to produce than the fat, sleek grade, yet he has brought 3 1/2 cents a pound less. Another feature of the situation worth remembering is that the market is usually flooded with the five dollar stuff, while the good grade steer is always at a premium and buyers are anxious to get them.

Why does one fruit tree of the same age, size and apparent thriftiness as others in the same orchard tract yield a larger quantity of fruit as well as a better quality? Many horticulturists believe that such a trait is due to tree individuality in the same way that exceptional milk capacity is an individual trait in dairy cows and vigor and large size and symmetry traits of representatives of beef types. Moreover, the horticulturist believes that, just as characteristics may be transmitted in the animal kingdom, so tree traits may be through bud or scion to its descendants. The Colorado and some other horticultural stations are experimenting along this line and in the near future hope to furnish conclusive proof of what seems to be a very reasonable hypothesis.

Southern corn belt and cotton belt states are coming to look upon soy beans as a legume of exceptional value for use in crop rotations as a soil renovator. In this respect being a desirable substitute for clover and alfalfa. It thrives under the same general conditions as does corn, though flourishing on much thinner soils. The soy beans not only serve the purpose well as a pasture and makes good hay if cut before the vines are too ripe, but makes excellent silage when sown with corn or a fine green manure if plowed under. In sections where the conditions are favorable and the season long enough the soy bean will produce from fifteen to twenty bushels of beans per acre, these making an excellent ration when ground with corn and having twice the feeding value of that cereal. In getting a start with the legume best results are secured by inoculating the field with soil from an established field or by inoculating the seed with cultures which one can secure fresh and reliable from the department of agriculture at Washington.
