

CURING THE BITER.

Breeder's Valuable Suggestion For Breaking Horses of Vicious Habit.

Many are at a loss as to a means of curing a horse of the biting habit. An expert breeder suggests the following treatment: Keep him, if possible, in such position that he can be approached from in front without entering his stall. When with him be very quiet and gentle and feed him with small apples, lumps of sugar or something of the sort and continue as long as he behaves. Meanwhile be prepared for treachery. Have a short whip at hand, but concealed from his view, and the moment he tries to bite strike him sharply around the nose. Strike hard so as to punish severely, but do not keep on striking. One or two blows are enough. Stand quietly until his mind has taken in the situation a little, then resume feeding. Repeat this treatment as often as possible, remembering that success will depend largely upon the shortness of the lessons and their frequent repetition. It may be some days before he will show much improvement, but if the treatment is perseveringly followed up he will see what the lesson means.

The value of this treatment lies in the fact that the horse by behaving properly not only receives immunity from punishment, but a reward besides, while misconduct invariably brings a prompt and sharp reproof.

The absolute cure of so deep seated a vice cannot be expected for some time, but a marked improvement should soon be shown. Remember that time is always necessary for the cure of such things and that all the patience the trainer can command is usually required.

Do not feed the horse too stimulating a diet, and it is important that he be used every day. Idleness causes nervous irritability and always aggravates a vice.

FATTENING THE PIGS.

Youngsters Will Put on Flesh More Economically Than Old Ones.

After it is determined what pigs are to be fed for market, fattening should be started immediately. Many experiments have proved that young animals fatten more economically than the old ones, and any delay in finishing is accompanied with a loss.

In some instances, but they are rare, it may pay to keep a pig over winter as a "store" hog, but as a general thing he loses the flesh he accumulated while suckling his dam, and this can only be replaced at increased expense. Corn will now come into the ration and should be supplemented by all the variety of feed at the feeder's command to keep the appetite on edge and the digestive organs in first class condition. This variety should consist of succulent feeds, mill feeds and dairy byproducts and, according to some breeding authorities, pasture.

When whey, buttermilk and skim-milk are at hand they can be used to very good advantage with the ration, starting with a proportion of about two pounds of milk to one of grain at incoming time and reducing the quantity of milk until the pig is finished on grain alone. Best results will be realized from dairy byproducts while pigs are young.

The fattening pigs should gain from one pound to one and a half pounds daily and weigh in the neighborhood of 250 or 300 pounds when they are nine or ten months old. A well bred pig finished at a weight of 250 pounds will about fill the market requirements and bring its owner a very satisfactory price.

How to Feed the Pony.

A small pony, especially if a Shetland, does not usually require much grain. A quart of corn in the morning and a quart of oats at noon and at night should be sufficient. Give it what it wants and, if the weather is suitable and there is good pasture, turn it out to grass whenever there is a chance.

Excellent Remedy For Mange.

For itch or mange, rubbing of tall or mane, wash thoroughly with warm soft water and soap, then rub in with brush a proper strength of coal tar dip used on sheep and dogs. Scrub every three or four days until cured. Disinfect stalls and harness also or you never will get rid of the pest.

Keep Calves Growing.

All good farmers watch the condition of their colts when put into winter quarters. A colt allowed to lose its coat flesh and become thin will never make the horse he would if kept growing from the start.

What Will Roosevelt do?

Ray Stannard Baker in the American Magazine.

It is safe to say, then, that Roosevelt will feel the pulse of the country pretty carefully—there at Osterville Bay—before he acts. He will have out all sorts of people to talk to him; he will set many newspapers and magazines. And when he does speak he will speak with the voice of the people—that is, if we can judge his future by the acts of his past.

And the people in this country are progressive politically; they are insurgent against the old party rule—against Aldrichism and Cannonism. They are for a more direct government by the people, and for a better governmental control of wealth. There are no two opinions about this. And Roosevelt is also a progressive, by temperament, by conviction, and as a political policy. Not long before his administration closed Congressman Gardner of Massachusetts headed a small committee to see Mr. Roosevelt and ask him if he could not help the progressives in their fight on the Cannon rules in the house. Congressman Gardner is a son-in-law of Senator Lodge. The president said to him:

"Gardner, you and I are in much the same position. Your father-in-law and my son-in-law don't approve of us radicals."
