An English gentleman residing in Calcutta brought an action against a firm of Paris pastry cooks and confectioners under rather interesting circumstances. The plaintiff was about to be married and ordered what has been called a phenomenal wedding cake from the defendants. A sum of $120 was paid down for the cake on delivery. The colossal and expensive article of confectionary was packed by the plaintiff's order, and he took it with him to Calcutta. On opening the case containing the cake when he arrived in India, the Englishman found that he had literally nothing but a shapeless mass of crumbs. The splendid gateau had been hopelessly bruised and broken during

An action was then brought against The Paris firm for a sum of $135, which included, besides the price paid for the cake, the cost of packing and transport. The defendants maintained before the Paris tribunal of commerce that they had no more responsibility after they had delivered over the cake to the person who ordered it. It was true that they recommended a packer, but that expert acted under the orders of another individual, who had been selected by the plaintiff to superintend the operation. The tribunal decided in favor of the defendants.-St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Two Convincing Reasons.

Lord Peterborough, who lived in the reign of Queen Anne, was very frolicsome, and one day seeing from his carriage a dancing master with pearl colored stockings lightly stepping over the broad stones and picking his way in extremely dirty weather he alighted and ran after him with drawn sword in order to drive him into the mud, but into which he of course followed himself.

This nobleman was once taken for the Duke of Marlborough and was mobbed in consequence. The duke was then in disgrace with the people, and Lord Peterborough was about to be roughly handled. Turning to them, he said:

"Gentlemen, I can convince you by two reasons that I am not the Duke of Marlborough. In the first place, I have only 5 guineas in my pocket, and in the second they are heartily at your service."-Sala's Journal.

Reproved by the Prince.

Not long ago the Prince of Wales was one of a house party, his host being a well known peer. After dinner the roy-al guest, the host and the other male visitors repaired to the billiard room. On a table at the side were two or three boxes of cigars, and the prince was helping himself to one, when an ambitious millionaire approached him, and taking from his pocket a cigar case held it out to the prince, saying, "I think, sir, you will find these better."

The angler fish is a slow swimmer, and it would have but little success if it had to chase the swift, active fishes upon which it feeds, so it snares them. Partially hiding itself in the mud or sand, it waves its long filaments with their glittering tips. As is well known, fishes are attracted by glistening objects moved about in the water. The neigh-boring fishes, following the instincts of their inquisitive nature, come to examine the curious object, and suddenly they find themselves snapped up in the wide jaws of their hidden foe. The angler is a very voracious creature, and on several occasions it has been known to seize a fish that had been booked and was being drawn to the surface. In one such case the angler seized a codfish and would not loosen its grip until it was struck on the head with a boathook. On another occasion the fish fell a victim to its own gluttony, for having dashed at a conger eel that had just been booked, and having taken it into its mouth, the eel contrived to escape through one of the gill apertures, and thus it was the unconscious means of involving its captor in its own fate.

THREE OLD DEATH SIGNS.

A Case Where Their Application Furnishes

Food For the Seperstitious.

Do you believe in the superstitions connected with the house of death? The contributor confesses that he has always been skeptical about them, but here are three old signs which prophesied death in a Waterbury home, which are almost remarkable in their coincidence, if not in supernatural signifi-

A group of people were sitting in a pleasant room one evening in one of the aburbs of Waterbury, where neighborly intercourse is often freer than in the city itself. There was a knock at the door, and another neighbor came in on an errand. Another knock and another neighbor, and then a third. Then some one remarked: "Three knocks and three callers. The next will come in without knocking, and death will come in after The next incomer opened the door without a knock, and it was a neighbor's boy, as strong and healthy a lad as one is likely to see anywhere. And death was behind him, though they did not see him nor think much of what had been said.

This boy's mother has always been disturbed by an extraordinary anxiety and restlessnes at the approach of death to any of her relatives. It has happen-ed several times that she has been pursued, as it seemed, through the house, from garret to cellar and through all ious fourth call at the neighbor's deor. this mother, who had heard nothing about that incident, was seized with this intangible fear and began her perplexed wandcrings through the house. In and out, up and down, she walked, with a frightened air, trying to escape what? She did not know, but they agreed that death was pursuing some member of the family. One day not long after, the boy who was the fourth caller and whose mother had had this premonition was sick. Not very, but a little. His father was sent for in the city to come home. He was detained and walked home in the early evening. A strange cat followed him home, crossing his track and winding its way in and out of his along the road. At home was another strange cat which had followed a sister home. They were stopped at the door and soon were joined by two more. The four stood there on guard all night and all next day with a dreadful patience and persistence, craving admittance with signs of horrid appetite, dodging into the house whenever the door was opened, and kept at a distance only by great difficulty. They might have been stoned or shot, but that is not the way the old superstition reads. The boy inside grew worse and died the next day. This is not a very remarkable story. but it made a good deal of an impres ion on the contributor as it was told to him by a member of the family who knew that those things had happened in just this way, that they were old superstitions which still live, and who asked him if he believed there was anything in it .- Waterbury (Conn.) A Workingman's Discovery.

Some years ago a tobacconist discovered the utility of tinfoil for wrapping tobaccos. Theretofore paper had been exclusively used for the purpose, but it did not serve to keep the moisture of the atmosphere away from the tobacco nor preserve the natural moisture of the tobacco from the effects of a dry or heated atmosphere. Paper also absorbed the aroma of the weed and was not sufficiently lasting. Therefore -tinfoil was used for wrappers. But it be-came costly and could only be rolled to a certain thickness or thinness, beyond which the ingenuity of man seemed to find it impossible to go. The fact was that no rollers could be made to sustain the pressure necessary to mashing the tinfoil to a leaf sufficiently thin to suit

Many ingenious inventors struggled with the proposition for months and gave up the problem as unsolvable, when a simple workman about the shop one day, after rolling two sheets to the customary thickness, put the two sheets together into the rollers and made both halves as thin as they were before. This was as simple as standing an egg on end, but it created a revolution in the manunished it with a full equipment for the facture of tinfoil for tobacconists' use purpose, rod, line and bait. WHY THE JUROR HELD OUT.

The Extraordinary Secret Imparted to Chief . stice In England.

The most remarkable case of a jury "standing out" against what seemed irrefutable testimony, and all through the resolution of one man, occurred before Chief Justice Dyer many years ago. Ho presided at a murder trial in which everything went against the prisoner, who on his part could only say that on his going to work in the morning he had found the murdered man dying and tried to help him, whereby he had become covered with blood, but when the man presently died he had come away and said nothing about it, because he was known to have had a quarrel with the deceased and feared he might get into trouble. The hayfork with which the man had been murdered had the prisoner's name on it. In other respects his guilt appeared to be clearly established, and the chief justice was convinced of it, but the jury returned a verdict of "Not guilty."

This was Chief Justice Dyer's case, and he put some very searching questions to the high sheriff. The cause of the acquittal, said the official, was undoubtedly the foreman, a farmer of expectations to the high sheriff. The cause of the acquittal, said the official, was undoubtedly the foreman, a farmer of expected to reventions. "Then," said the indige, "I must see this foreman, for an explanation of the matter I will have."

The foreman came, and after extracting from his lordship a promise of secrecy proved at once that the prisoner had been rightly acquitted, "for," said he, "it was I myself who killed the man."

It had been no murder, for the other had attacked him with the hayfork, and —as he showed—severely injured him, but in the struggle to get possession of the weapon he had the misfortune to give the man a fatal wound. He had no fears as to his being found guilty of murder, but, the assizes being just over his form and affairs would have for the fatal the fore the man a fatal wound.
