JUSTICE FIELDS RESIGNS.

He Breaks the Record Having Served Longer Than Chief Justice

Associate Justice Stephen J. Field has formally retired from the supreme court of the United States after serving 34 years in that tribunal. While his resignation does not take effect till Dec. 1st, he will not again sit in that court. Speaking of his successor a dispatch from Washington says: succeed Justice Field. McKenna is be-Bring your job work to the WEST lieved to have been promised the place to step into the cabinet. In this event it is practically certain that California will not lose a place in the cabinet, and that McKenna will be succeeded by Judge Waymire. If McKenna does not go on the supreme bench, it is thought that Waymire will. It is known that the president discussed this matter with Waymire when the latter was here last spring, and Waymire expressed a preference for the cabinet.
