THE CURRENCY QUESTION.

Commercial Review.

England's answer to the proposals of our traveling bimetallic commission is decisive. There will be no international agreement respecting silver coinage. The whole question, therefore, in so far as America is concerned, reverts to the proposition on which the last campaign was fought. If the United States, says the New York Financier, desires to enlarge the functions of silver, she must work on the problem independently. As the attempt to do so failed between 1878 and 1890, and again between 1890 and 1893, there is little hope that fresh efforts would result in anything but disaster. Since 1893 the demonetization of silver has become world-wide. The South American republics are discarding the metal, Japan has gone to the gold standard, and even China is beginning to feel the effect of a debased currency. What hope is there, then, that the United States can create a stable ratio through the free minting not only of her own product, but that of the whole world as well? The idea, on its face, is preposterous, and is not to be entertained for a moment.

But will the agitation for free coinage cease, now that the fate of silver, through the logic of events, seems sealed? We believe not, for the reason that the loudest advocates of free silver do not care especially for the opening of the mints to a product in which they are not interested. They represent an element of discontent in our social life that will never be eradicated, but they delude with plausible arguments a great mass of people who are honestly seeking relief from burdens which they attribute to monetary mistakes. It is these people who must be reached if the free-silver heresy is to be killed. Arguments alone cannot convert them. They are hampered to some extent through the action of our currency laws, but not in the way of restricted silver coinage as much as in the lack of elasticity in our note currency. Of course no human enactment short of a general distribution of visible wealth can put them in a position of absolute independence, but they do not want that. They are asking, merely, a means of equitable relief under which their daily transactions may be expanded to the largest limit possible, without imposing unjust burdens on others. The remedy then appears to rest in congressional action which shall give to every community facilities for dealing in local credits—in other words, to place within reach of all deserving persons, no matter what may be their geographical location, the means of satisfying their wants, on a safe and equitable basis. A free banking law, under the strict administration of the government, would do this. It would also render the silver malady innocuous. It seems to us that the solution of the question will be found along such a line of action, simply because it removes the source of the disease.

The secretary of the treasury has issued a circular letter to employes which is full of good common sense. The letter provides that clerks who receive stated salaries may pay debts contracted for the necessary support of themselves and families, or else give a good reason for not doing so, failing to do which they will be discharged.—Regist River Courier.

We have received a copy of the election laws of Oregon with the comments of the Secretary of State Kincaid. This has just been issued under Mr. Kincaid's direction and gives full information about the time and manner of selecting officers in this state.

RECIPROcity PROSPECTS.

Washington Star: The Dingley law is only about four months old. It has not had time to justify itself as a revenue producer, owing to the heavy anticipatory imports during the time that congress was giving it final shape, but its provisions have been clear from the day it was signed by the president, and foreign countries are fully advised as to its bearing and significance. Is there single sign of a tariff war against the United States on the horizon? Is there not, on the contrary, a sign of commercial good-will in every direction? Foreign governments are putting the same high value on our markets that we ourselves in the Dingley law have put upon them. Instead of making war on us, they are overtures to trade with us on terms of mutual benefit. The reciprocity clause of the new law promises to be one of its most useful features. Great Britain invokes in the interest of her possessions in the West Indies. Sir Wilfrid Laurier is now in Washington willing to discuss terms for increased trade between Canada and the United States. France desires to negotiate a reciprocity treaty, and Peru does also. It is not too much to say, indeed, that the United States has only to show a willingness on the subject to extend her trade by means of reciprocity on advantageous terms in nearly any direction.

PROFESSORS AND POSTAL BANKS.

Chicago Record:

Simply as an expression from men who are trained to deal with problems and to form their opinions from conviction, the opinions of the fourteen professors of Northwestern university to whom a postal savings bank petition was presented are of interest. Each of these gave his indorsement to the project, and apparently took pleasure in doing so. Just as the laboring men approved the plan from a keen personal sense of its need; just as business men have indorsed it as the best available means of promoting contentment and thus forwarding agitations unfavorable to steady growth in trade, the college men approve it as a theory sound in the abstract and practicable in its application to the conditions of the time.

The Northwestern university faculty is representative, in its personnel, of many educational institutions of high class throughout the country. It is not unreasonable to suppose that an actual test would disclose that the greater part of the educators in the country would take the same view.

In the light of this general conviction among all classes as to the merits of postal banks, how long will it be before the system is regarded by the people not as merely an advantage but as a necessity of modern social and economic conditions?

FOR SALE OR EXCHANGE.

A house and lot in Glenada. The house is 16 by 24 feet and one story and a half in height. Also a good woodshed on premises. For further particulars inquire at this office.

SHOULD BE ONE.

Pacific Empire:

The Oregonian's facetious allusion to the lack musical instrument at the penitentiary recalls to mind the fact that there is one lack at that perhaps otherwise perfectly supplied institution which is so serious to jest about. There is no reason to look after the physical welfare of the woman prisoners. Common decency in this civilized age demands jail and prison matrons. The neglect to provide such an officer at the penitentiary will, it is hoped be remedied at the next session of the legislature, if it cannot be done before.

IN JUSTICE COURT.

Jared Scott was arrested and brought before Justice Wilson a few days ago, charged with assault on James Dick. Upon hearing the evidence Justice Wilson decided the diversion worth about $5 and costs amounting to $9.15 more, and accordingly gave Scott his choice between paying that sum and going to jail for seven days. He declined to pay the fine and Constable Tanner took him to Eugene last Friday.

TO OUR PATRONS.

INDEPENDENCE OR DEATH.

Oregonian:

The answer of the leaders of the Cuban rebellion to the very liberal scheme of autonomy proposed by Spain is, "Independence or death." The trouble with the Spanish conversion to reason and liberality is that it comes too late. When England granted Canada enlarged home rule, after the brief rebellion of 1837 she did not do it on the heels of a terrible war of three years such as has desolated Cuba, filled her territory with fire, slaughter, and finally famine, and left the indelible vindictiveness that Weyler's policy of creating a solitude to compel surrender has made. The Cubans are either fit for self-government or they are not; if they are fit for the liberal autonomy of Canada, they are fit for independence. If anarchy will come with independence, it will come quite as quick with autonomy maintained in the presence of a Spanish army whose hands are red up to the elbows in Cuban blood. Nobody can, no or will decide this question save the Cubans themselves, for Spain cannot force any scheme of autonomy upon a reluctant people, and the United States has neither the right nor the inclination to do more than tender Cuba her good offices in this matter.

Had Weyler's remorseless but utterly ineffective warfare continued, we should have been compelled, as a matter of self-interest, to interfere; we have by our courteous but firm remonstrance with Spain, secured the release of the American prisoners; we have effected an amelioration in the Spanish methods of warfare, Weyler has been recalled, and a liberal scheme of autonomy has been tendered the insurgents. Nevertheless, the present outlook gives small hope of the pacification of Cuba upon any terms short of independence, for Spain, which clearly cannot conquer Cuba, will be compelled ultimately to concede independence to an island she has almost made into a desert, and which, nevertheless, cries, "Independence or death." The United States has done her full duty with singular tact and discretion. We had a right to insist on peace in Cuba for our valuable trade. We had a right to insist that war be carried on with the methods of enlightened civilized warfare and with reasonable respect to American interests. We are bound to enforce our neutral obligations, and we have a right, when war is hopeless, to propose mediation, but we have no right, and will not assume the right, to decide the question for the acceptance of autonomy for Cuba.

If Spain should consent to grant Cuba her independence, it is believed that she would demand a heavy war indemnity of at least $100,000,000 as the price of it. Cuba is a desert today, and could not afford to agree to the imposition of so terrible a burden upon 1,400,000 people, a debt that would amount to $71 per capita. This enormous indemnity would afflict Cuba with a greater debt, in proportion to the rent-producing capacity of the lands and the number of her people, than is carried by Ohio, Columbia and the Argentine Republic. In 1891 the consolidated debt of Cuba amounted to $168,000,000. If the scheme of autonomy be accepted, this Cuban debt, existing prior to the present war, would probably be assumed by the new home-rule government, but if Spain should add the $300,000,000 of debt incurred by her during the present insurrection, Cuba would have to carry on her impoverished shoulders a debt of nearly $500,000,000, which would be a greater burden per capita by a least three times than is borne by the people of France.

Under these circumstances, Cuba would fairly argue that it would be cheaper to hold out for independence than accept such a debt-ridden autonomy; for, in event of absolute independence, she would probably repudiate all responsibility for Spanish debts, past and present. Even with full control of the tariff and taxation conceded by Spain, Cuba would carry a debt that would forbid all chance of happy and prosperous home rule. The new Cuban president is an uncompromising enemy to Spain, and during his two years of office any arrangement between the Cuban and Spanish governments is hopeless, as he holds a decisive influence over the army from General Gomez down to the last soldier. The outlook, from the point of sound policy as well as embittered sentiment, is that Cuba will be sure to spurn the offer of autonomy, even with the concession of the right to regulate its own tariff laws, the denial of which would be fatal to the whole scheme of autonomy. Cuba will certainly hold out until our congress meets, when she will doubtless secure the recognition of her belligerency, and with that concession she will be able to defy Spain and ultimately extort independence.

THE SUPREME COURT.

Portland Welcome:

Justice Field is quoted as saying recently that "all our decisions have not met with the universal approval of the American people, yet it is to the glory of the people that they have always and everywhere yielded a willing obedience to them." The sentimental statement is not quite true historically. In 1806 President Jefferson refused to obey the supreme court's order to appear and testify as a witness in the Burr treason case. In 1832 the supreme court rendered a decision affecting the state of Georgia, in what is known as the Cherokee case, but the state disregarded the decision, and President Jackson remarked: "Marshall has made his decision; now let him enforce it." But it was never enforced. President Lincoln in 1861 and during subsequent years, disobeyed the mandate of the supreme court, notably in the Merryman case. And even in recent years there have been many signs of disagreement and dissatisfaction with the court. It took the federal military army to enforce its injunction in the Pullman case, and at the last election nearly half of the voters of the country, by upholding the Chicago platform, virtually rebuked the supreme court. The celebrated Dred Scott decision was hated and spat upon by half the country, and public opinion has frequently been loud and open in criticism of the court's decisions. The "Welcome" isn't saying that the court in any of these cases was wrong; it says that the people have always meekly and uncomplainingly bowed to the decisions of the supreme court.

THE HICKS 1898 ALMANAC & PAPER.

We are informed that the 1898 almanac of Prof. Irl R. Hicks is now ready, and judging from its past history, it will not be many weeks in finding its way into homes and offices all over America. It is much larger and finer than any previous issue. It contains 116 pages, is splendidly printed and illustrated on fine book paper, having the finest portrait ever given of Prof. Hicks. It can no longer be denied that the publications of Prof. Hicks have become a necessity to the family and commercial life of this country. His journal, "Word and Works, aside from its storm, weather and astronomical features, has taken rank with the best literary, scientific and family magazines of the age. Do not believe hearsay and reports. See the Hicks almanac and paper for yourself. You will then know why they are so popular. They are educators of the millions, and unrivaled safeguards to property and human life. It is matter of simple record that Prof. Hicks has foretold for many years all great storms, floods, droughts and tornadoes, even the recent terrible drought over all the country. The almanac alone is 25 cents a copy. The paper is $1.00 a year with the almanac as a premium. Send to WORD AND WORKS PUB., Co. 2291 Locust St., St. Louis, Mo.

TO PREVENT SHIPWRECK.

Fishing Gazette:

The inefficiency of the human ear in locating sounds has been ludicrously demonstrated by the inaccurate efforts of a blindfolded person to tell from which direction sounds come. In the case of fog a sea this difficulty has become a serious matter. This at last promises to be overcome by the ingenious instrument known as the "eophone." This instrument consists of a vane mounted on a vertical rod. On either side of this vane is a sound receiver, from which a tube leads to one of the ears of an observer located in a room below. Each convex surface of the vane acts as a reflector to its own receiver and as a screen to the other one. The rod carrying this vane can be rotated by means of a hand wheel, and to use it the observer turns the vane around till the sound investigated is heard in one ear only. The motion is then reversed till the sound is heard in the other ear only, when the direction from which the said sound proceeds will be about midway between the two positions. The device in question has been installed aboard the United States steamship Indiana and thoroughly tested by a committee appointed for the purpose.

The WASHINGTON News Letter in its editorial column on Binger Hermann, among other things says that "few men in the United States are better fitted for the presidency than Binger Hermann, and he may be given a seat in the United States senate at no distant date."

Literary.

(ORIGINAL AND SELECTED.)

Foolish men mistake transitory sentiments for eternal facts and go astray more and more.

God has placed the genius of women in their hearts; because the works of this genius are always works of love. Let the farmer for evermore be honored in his calling, for they who labor in the earth are the chosen people of God.

Adversity, like winter weather, is of use to kill those vermin which the summer of prosperity is apt to produce and nourish.

Antithesis may be the blossom of wit, but it will never arrive at maturity unless sound sense be the trunk, and truth the root.

Though all afflictions are evils in themselves, yet they are good for us, because they discover to us our disease and tend to our cure.

The vices of old age have the stiffness of iron; and as it is the unfittest time to learn it, so the unfittest of it to unlearn will be found much greater.

Remember you have not a sinew whose law of length is not action; you have not a faculty of body, mind, or soul, whose law of improvement is not energy.

If there is ever a time to be ambitious, it is when ambition is easy, but when it is hard, fight in darkness; fight when you are down; die hard, and you won't die at all.

Nobility of birth does not always insure a corresponding nobility of mind; if it did, it would always act as a stimulus to noble actions; but it sometimes acts as a clog rather than a spur.

Where ambition can be so happy as to cover its enterprises, even to the person himself, under the appearance of principle, it is the most incalculable and inflexible of all human passions.

To love all mankind, from the greatest to the lowest (or meanest,) a cheerful state of being is required; but in order to see into mankind, into life, and still more, into ourselves, suffering is requisite.

Amusement is the waking sleep of labor. When it absorbs the right, patience and strength that might have been seriously employed, it loses its distinctive character, and becomes the taskmaster of idleness.

It is the appearances that fill the scene; and we pause not to ask of what realities they are the proxies. When the actor of Athens moved all hearts as he clasped the burial urn, and burst into broken sobs, how few then knew that it held the ashes of his son.

If adversity hath killed his thousands, prosperity hath killed his ten thousands; therefore adversity is to be preferred. The one deceives, the other instructs; and therefore many philosophers have voluntarily sought adversity and so much commended it in their precepts.

We are apt to rely upon future prospects, and become really expensive while we are only rich in possibility. We live up to our expectations, not to our possessions, and make a figure proportionable to what we may be, not what we are. We outrun our present income, as not doubting to disburse ourselves out of the profits of some future place, project or reversion that we have in view.

Each under his borrowed guise the actor belongs to himself. He has put on a mask, beneath it his real face still exists; he has thrown himself into a foreign individuality, which in some sense forms a shelter to the integrity of his own character; he may indeed wear festive attire, but his mourning is beneath it; he may smile, divert, act, his soul is still his own, his inner life is still undisturbed; no indiscreet question will lift the veil, no coarse hand burst open the gates of the sanctuary.
