Learned Pig In 1815.

In 1815 the royal mews at Charing Cross were standing and on the actual site now occupied by Nelson's column a long wooden shed was placed, and in it was the skeleton of a whale of great dimensions. Through it the writer walked from end to end.

Opposite stood, as now they stand, spring gardens, where in old times the beaus and belles of the court of Charles Il disported themselves. There in a house was located "the learned pig." Bystanders desirous of seeing its per-to give your time.'

TURY, (six volumes. complete,) 225,000: a smaller one playing cards were apparently indiscriminately thrown down. Oulookers, possibly confederates, named a particular card, and the pig trotted round and placed his snout on the named card without an error.

From that exhibition, the writer, in the same house (he thinks), was taken and introduced to "the Hottentot Venus," an ebony damsel clad in gauzy garments of the most flimsy kind, who displayed her figure by proudly traversing and circling round the room in which she gave her receptions.

Issuing thence, the writer was taken to the horse guards parade to see the cannon used by the French as a mortar during the siege of Cadiz, 1812. It was on a carriage in a horizontal position. and the writer, lifted by his father, was thrust inside the muzzle, and, struggling somewhat, was, with a little difficulty, extracted from his confined position. - London Sketch.

Is "Dy Jingo!" Basque?

Prince L. L. Bounparte, many years ago, claimed "By jingo" as an English borrowing from the Basques. The Sou-letin Basques say "Bai Jinko," mean-ing "Yes, God," not "By God" or "Par Dieu." The k would easily become g in the mouth of a foreigner. Basque sailors and soldiers have always been ubiquitous. Lome time ago I was at an inn at Larraina (the thrashing Squib-The editor seems to have the floor) in Soule, where the host, who had gained the queen's ir dal for service in the French army in the Crimean war, repeated "Bai Jinko" hundreds of times during the day. No doubt the Basques in the time of Rabelais, the first author to put Easque words in print (though be did so rather clumsily) had the same babit. It must always have attracted the attention of foreign ers, who would readily imitate it .-Notes and Queries.

The picture my card, which was not a trump one, called up by the thought was so poignant that I proposed a visit to Westminster abbey. She appeared a shade surprised—I certainly was myself—and then agreed, with a little sigh, which plainly said, "As well there as any-where else." But once she accepted my companionship by stepping into the hansom I called she made, I could see, a distinct effort to take interest in the

On one thing at least I am quite clear. It is when we came out I was decidedly hangry; so, artfally piloting my charge past a restaurant, I suggested lunch.

Here again a lacuna occurs, for I have no distinct recollection of the earlier stages of the banquet save the other fact that her mode of eating and drinking forced me to make comparisons which would have brought me slowly to my senses had not the unforceen, which has such a trick of happening, done so with paralyzing promptunde. Her little hunting watch had ran down, but the officious cuckoo belonging to the restaurant clock spoke so gone. I suppose my consternation got into my face, for I caught the eye of the polyglot waiter fixed upon me He was tall, and, I doubt not, swift of foot, and as he smiled thinly I could see that he bad lost one front tooth and all his illusions. I put my hat on and took it off again. At another time, in another place, the incident would have been merely laughable, but now, with her I had been so blase, so mildly cynical; Oh, it was unthinkable! I moved toward the counter which was near the door, shadowed by the waiter, who was mentally calling the police, and approaching the lady in charge explained the situation. She was a German frau of spotless morals, and she listened calmiy to my tale, the cold contempt of a narrow, literal nature glinting in her small eyes. The comedy of the situa-tion did not strike her. She only saw that I had no money. "Dey pay, dose

MARRIAGE OF OFFICERS. The Armies of Europe Have Various Rules

The restrictive conditions at present in force with regard to the marriage of officers in the Russian army forbid this privilege under any circumstance in the case of officers under the age of 28. Between the ages of 23 and 28 years the dot of an officer's wife must amount to a sum representing the minimum in-

Come of 250 rubles yearly.
On comparison of these conditions with those regulating the same question with those regulating the same question in other European armies it may be noted that in the Austria-Hungarian army the number of officers authorized to contract marriage is limited by a fixed proportion assigned to each grade, and, these totals being reached, all further marriages must be deferred pending the contract of the contra ing the occurrence of vacancies in the married establishments. The Italian army regulations, which fix the income of the fiances at a minimum of from 1,200 to 2,000 lire, would appear to be more rational in their operation. Italian officers, however, apply a somewhat liberal interpre this law, with the result that the number of marriages occurring under actual provisious does not exceed more than an eighthr of the officers being united unmony only, and thus exposing selves to all the inconveniences attend a marriage not recognized by

Similar disabilities would now appear to be inoursed by Russian officers, and suggestions have been made by the press in Russia that a general revision of the law is becoming necessary. The question is assuming some importance from the fact that Russian officers, reaching a total number of nearly 40,-000, represent one of the most impor-tant classes in the state.—Brooklyn Cit-
