THE BISCUIT DIDN'T RISE. MAY BE THE MISSING LINK. How a Young Cook Thought to Bemed

A distinguished paleontologist claims have discovered facts serving to show that the vermiform appendix, that mys-teriously useless organ that has annoyed the buman family so much of late years, is no more nor less than the rudimentary remnant of the gizzard with which he believes the monstrous progenitors of man of the tertiary period of the earth's existence were supplied. Some of these gigantic creatures, lizards in form, birds in kind, animals in some functions, are believed to have developed by the gradual stages described by the supporters of the theory of evolu-tion into the semblance of a human be-

If the bird form be the original of the human race, it is reasonable to believe that it may have been supplied with a gizzard, which in the bird of modern the biscuit had been in the oven a few time possesses a definite and important function in the digestion of the food. admiringly at the outside of the many cases swallowed whole. Some her culinary skill, she suddenly ex-birds can crush the food with their claimed: beaks, but normally the digestion is permitted largely through the agency of the gizzard, where the food is ground into fine particles. The interior coating ing the of this organ is rough and muscular. Many birds swallow, as far as the gizzard, small pobbles that aid the process of attrition. Thus if the latest theory be correct a curious paradox is presented. Whereas in the beginning, as now, the gizzard performed its functions most satisfactorily when supplied with indigestible substances, its rudim that now remains in the human structure becomes a center of dangerous con-ditions as soon as any foreign substance, and especially any hard matter, is de-posited in it.

One of the marvels of anatomy for some years has been this strange sac in the upper intestines, apparently with-out the least function in the digestive system and capable of being removed without affecting the health of the patient save to a favorable degree. Re-searches have revealed many traces of such rudiments in the human system Darwin's studies brought to light man; resemblances between man and the lower orders. It may now be that the despised vermiform appendix will be exploited as the real "missing link" binding man to the past ages, when life assumed many forms that are today un-known.—Washington Star.

The backing cough, spitting of blood, weak longs, and all similar troubles of the organs of breathing, will surely lead to consumption, if they are not already the signs of it. Then there are the other indications of the approach of consumption, such as night-sweats, emariation, or wasting away of flesh from bad nutrition, which, if neglected, lead to certain death.
