MER TIME IS COMING.

The papers for weeks have been filled with heart-sickening tales of death and own state of Oregon is entirely exempt death hovers in the sir, and if it was known that cyclones would contimes to be the horror that they are now becoming, many of the homes already made in states where they are prevalent world be abandoned; and so we think that future emigration to the west will come farther west than heretofore; west until they can look across the Pacific from the soil of Oregon.

We have a large and fertile state with thousands of the right class of people; cars to Missouri River points via workers. We have the land and natural of for if there is too much rainfall in western Oregon you can sottle east of the mountains, where it is not so wet. We have advantages that never can be enumerated in a newspaper article. Oregon has never tooted its own born very persistently; she has wever had a boom; but her time is coming and just as soon as the Nicaragua canal is a fixed fact, the searchlight of the world will be turned on us and we will be able to hide no longer, nor longer nurse our 640-acre farms for the sole purpose of being able to say we own them. The world is tramping this way; get your ears to the ground and you may be able to hear it, for before that bely boy of yours wears pants you won't recognize the Oregon you found in front of the royal palace. It has reiere when you crossed the plains in 1846. Oregonians are good at hiding in Egypt to unearth sheets of papyrus, themselves, but you can't hide much onger, the crowd is coming this way.

SUNDAY PAPERS.

Relative to Sunday newsdealers, the London Mail says: In ancient times before the printing press was invented. and in fact before papers came into use, Sunday was the favorite day for the dissemination of news by means of wax tablets and sheets of papyrus. The University of Pennsylvania sent out an expedition, and in excavations recently made in Mesopotamia, bricks were found inscribed with public notices, which were exposed to the public on Sundays mained, however, for English explorers which may be regarded as showing what the first Sunday paper looked like. A strange fact is that the first Sunday newspapers dating back to the second century of our era not only conveyed information to the people, but were illustrated. Orude sketches have been found on some of these old papyrus referring more of less directly to current
