HOP CROP WILL BE LARGE.

Albany Herald: J. M. Russell, a prominent hopbuyer of Portland, who is making a tour of inspection of the state, says reports sent to him regarding the condition of this year's hop crop by agents are fully corroborated by personal investigation. The crop of the year in Oregon, he says, making a conservative estimate, will aggregate about 85, 000 bales. Lice and mold, he says, have not yet made their appearance. The foliage, though not as thick as last year, is perfectly healthy.
