ARMY QUARRELS THAT ALMOST END-ED IN TRAGEDIES.

In His Heart-A Flery Lieutenant Colo nel Who Wanted to Kill His Saperlos Oficer-A Peacemaking Adjutant.

"Tragedies in our own camps, outside of battles, were more common than the public knows," said a distinguished soldier.

"The shooting of Major General Nclson at Louisville by Brigadier General Jeff C. Davis because Nelson in a fit of anger had called Davis a long string of hard names, is one of the few that came to the surface. You wouldn't think it to a tragedy that it makes my gray hair rise up as I recall it.

"While a number of officers of the regiment were in the major's tent I said something that a captain took excep-tions to, and a war of words followed. When he plumped out, 'You are a liar!' I struck out with my right and set him to bleeding. He came back at me like a tiger cat. We clinched and for three or four minutes had it hot and sharp; then the others separated us. He made all sorts of threats. I was adjutant. He ranked me, and I confess that for a time HOTEL EUGENE I did fear he would make me trouble in the way of court martial, but the matter seemed to blow over.

"One fall afternoon the captain invited me to take a walk with him. Think-ing that our troubles had completely healed, I consented. On the way back to camp we passed through an orebard. I climbed a tree to get some apples. Just as I reached for an apple I saw the captain reach for his revolver and glare at me like a very fiend. Instantly I loos-ened my hold and dropped to the ground. Soizing a stake, I took my place by his side and said, 'Now, you cowardly dog, put up that gun or I'll brain you.' This time he was kept on a hot griddle for a month, though I made no threats and had no thought of reporting his attempt to assassinate me.

"The next fight we got into we made friends until the final round up, when General Joe Johnston had his men throw down their guns and go home to 'make a crox.' It happened in this way: The colonel had given the order to form line of battle. As adjutant it was my duty to see that each captain carried out the order. When I reached the would be assassin and had performed my duty and started to go away, he called out, 'Adjutant, come back.'
When I complied, he took my hand, against the accommodations. The next looked me squarely in the eye and said: 'Lieutenant, can you forgive me for all of my meanness to you? I hope so. I have never had a good hour since that incident in the orchard.'

Lieutenant, can you forgive me for all guesta.

"How did that there picter of yours come out, anyhow?" asked the curious landlord.

"'With all my heart, captain. about that little affair.' "As I said, nothing else came up to never met after being mustered out. He died three years ago. Of course I could have sent him out of the army in disgrace and placed him in the penitentiary after he was out, but I've always been glad I did not. He was a good soldier in battle, as brave as they made them, but a bulldog in camp. He left the army a major. His name? Never mind that. It is a true story. I wish it were not, for I cannot forget that at one time in my life I was in a fair way to be murdered." "Report to your headquarters under

The colonel of a western regiment hissed that remark to his lieutenant colonel as he dismissed the parade one evening in December, 1864, a few miles back of Petersburg. "I refuse to go, d--- you," was the threat to go to the colonel's quarters Write for prices and terms to San Fran and cut him down with his sword. He was a powerful man, able to carry out his threat unless the colonel should get the drop. Once the arrested officer got away and was half way to the colonel's cabin, with sword drawn. "Stop, man," said the adjutant. "Would you blot your record of three years by com-mitting murder? Think of that. Think of your wife and children. Come back to your quarters. You shall not go a step farther in that direction until you have killed me."

"I don't want to kill you, but I'm going to kill the colouel." "All right, kill him, but wait until tomorrow-until it is light. Don't shoot a man in the dark. That is no way for a brave man to do."

He went back to his bank and slept until morning. When he awoke, he came to me and said: "How can I get out of this scrape, adjutant? Write the colonel an apology."

He wrote it, and the adjutant took it to the colonel, who read it, laughed and said, "Bring Colonel Blank to my quarters." They met like a pair of brothers, and to this day the adjutant believes that he prevented an army tragedy, and I guess he did.—Chicago Times-Heraid.

Free Press. I remember a curious incident con-nected with the tap root of an oak. This oak, a good tree of perhaps 200 years' growth, was being felled at Bradenham wood when the woodmen said the angry colonel, who was in the right, for the lieutenant colonel, who had been drinking, had disobeyed orders.

The adjutant knew both officers well, and that it would not do for them to come together that night. He had a merry time of it keeping them apart. The lieutenant colonel would jump up and start for the cabin door with a process of its increase till at length we process of its increase till at length we found wood and iron thus strangely wedded. That tap root with the shoe about it is now or used to be a paper-weight in the vestibule of Bradenham Hall.—Rider Haggard in Longman's Magazine

By "chemically pure water' we usually understand perfectly fresh, distilled water. Distilled water is a dangerous protoplasmic poison. The same poisonous effects must occur whenever distilled water is drunk. The sense of taste is the first to protest against the use of this substance. A monthful of distilled water, taken by inadvertence. will be spit out regularly The local poisonous effect of distilled water makes itself known by all the symptoms of a catarrh of the stomach on a small scale. The harmfulness of the process, so much resorted to today, of washing out the stomach with distilled water is acknowledged - National Druggist

The placing of lampposts in front of the houses of the chief magistrates of towns is an ancient custom We find in posts were so placed in front of sheriffs houses. Regional says

What brave curved posts. Who knows but here in time, sir, you may keep your shrievaltie. And I be one of the serjants?

From sheriffs, the practice extended to the houses of univers and provosta ft has been suggested, with some prob-ability, that the posts were at first in-tended for the affixing of proclamations which it was the duty of the sheriffs to publish.

Major Tom Williams some time age told me the story of one of Colonel Gib Wright's adventures in South Carolina in the closing months of the war.

It seems that General Kilpatrick, the Federal cavalry commander, had cap-tured a number of Confederates, and Wright was anxious to rescue them. He called for volunteers to go with him into the enemy's camp at night and picked out the men he needed from those who responded.

The Federal troopers were snoozing nietly in their camp and on both sides of the road leading to it, and their prisoners dozed by a fire near the center.

Just how they got there would be hard to explain, but shortly after midnight Gib Wright, at the head of a few might Gib Wright, at the head of a few men, rode at a gentle pace into the camp. The drowsy Federals took them for a party of their own men returning from a scout, and paid no attention to them. Everything was working smoothly until one of the prisoners caught a glimpse of the newcomers. The fellow lost his head and ruined the whole business. He leaped to the feet and leaved into the feet and ed to his feet and looked into the of the advancing Confederates.

"Horray, boys!" he shouted in his delirious delight. "Hang me, if there ain't old Gib Wright and his crowd. Durned if the whole Confederate army, ain't right behind him!"

The prisoners all rushed forward with the regular rebel vall, and the sleeping

"Not a bit of it." laughed the artist. Federals suddenly became very wide bullets on their visitors, and Wright and his men had almost a miraculous deliverance. Several were killed and wounded, but the leader and the majority of the party managed to get away.—Atlanta Constitution.
