At the close of this nineteenth century the world has a grand, terrible, and horrifying spectacle—the breaking up—the explosion—so to speak—of the largest empire at the world's joints, whose possessions cover about as great an extent of territory as those of Russia and Great Britain combined—as to all purposes in a state of anarchy.

Nobody can believe, after a little reflection, that the war fighting against foreignists was created or even encouraged, by the Chinese government—which never is it. Any one who has been enough to rule at all, has too much brain to interfere in any manner with ministers of powerful foreign nations, or to act more upon visiting residents.

It is not difficult to divine the real cause of this gigantic tempest—which a weak and unstable government has unspun possible. The Chinese wall, which has been broken down in some places, has given free access to the hearts of the Chinese people. These have "the foreign devil" just as bitterly as ever; and his railroads and telegraphs they consider as part of the satanic paraphernalia. Their theory of life is as exactly opposite to ours as is their side of the world. Their white mounting-goods and trading from right to left, and planting rooted themselves, are only trees of knowledge of nations in which they differ exactly and hopelessly from us. Their habits and customs are rooted thousands of years into the soil of China. When they come here on money-making expeditions, they bring with them their own ways, and keep them, as nearly as they can under American conditions. And they cling all the more closely to their ideas, from the fact that they are so old; that we are the newer of the two; that we differ from them instead of they from us.

Against, and into this great mass of people, numbering between three and four hundred millions, western enterprise and civilization have been struggling for several years. The European "powers" have been acting at the continually, both with the assassin's pen and the soldier's sword, to get them to give up some of their treasures. They have been convinced, or half convinced, some of the most intelligent ones, as we reason intelligence, that western ways are the best.

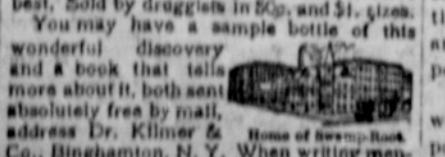

Encouraged by such concessions as they have succeeded in obtaining, the more greedy of the nations and some of their inhabitants as private citizens, have gone on, considering the old empire as a rich wilderness to be conquered and have pushed themselves wherever they could get. They have gone beyond the limits of legitimate trade and entered upon petty careers of conquest. They have even taken pains to keep their ultimate purposes to themselves, and have talked truly and publicly with each other and with the world, about "partitioning China among themselves."

It does not inspire wonder, that these facts have gone far toward increasing the Chinese hatred against everything not Chinese born; and the sentiment needed only a definite form and color to give it a terrible power. This seems to have been supplied by the organization of the "Boxers", who for some years have been growing stronger and more formidable; and the present ominous state of things is the result.

Of course every country of importance that has citizens in China, will do its best for their safety and remuneration in such cases as it is not too late for that; and hence, for the time being, all the stronger European nations, and United States besides, are at war in China (not with, we hope).

But even anarchy has in it the tamer of which new nations are made; and law and order will of course eventually have sway in China. In what form the reconstructed nation will exist, no one can foretell; but it is to be hoped that the Latin and Anglo-Saxon nations will, after making themselves good for what losses they have already incurred, keep their hands off.

So it will open to them, although California will be the end and other and, another territories will reach California on the part of Ryukyu, now Port Arthur. That will be a fine port, and a chain of territory around it will be set apart for the use of manufacturers deriving a base for manufacturing the products imported thencefrom the rest of the world. That means a great opening for American materials."

The official announcement that this Government will get out of China just as soon as soon as the Chinese set up a stable government of their own and the election for delegates to the Chinese constitutional convention, which will constitute the framework of that government will be held in September, seems to officially dispose of all doubt about the government encouraging the annexation movement. That amendment will eventually come is the opinion of many of those who have deeply studied the matter, but it now looks as though it would not be until after the Chinese had full opportunity to go it alone long enough to determine for themselves.

If Mr W. W. Rockhill, who has been giving a diplomatic commission as special envoy, ranking something like an ambassador, and ordered to proceed to China at the earliest possible moment, can't get information in China, which is what he is to go after, probably no consider can. He is one of the few white men who can speak and write the Chinese language thoroughly.

FREE TO INVENTORS.

The experience of C. A. Snow & Co in obtaining more than 25,000 patents for inventors has enabled them to helpfully answer many questions relating to the protection of intellectual property. They have done in a pamphlet treating briefly of United States and foreign patents, with cost of same, and how to procure them; trade marks, designs, easements, infringements, decisions in leading patent cases, etc.

This pamphlet will be sent free to anyone writing to C. A. Snow & Co., Washington, D. C.

THE TOLEDO WEEKLY BLADE.

Presidential Campaign Year.

The Toledo Weekly Blade has an enormous circulation at all times. The year of a presidential campaign however, it is regularly read by near two million people. Not only republicans, but people of all classes, in every section of the United States read it for political information. For thirty years it has been a regular visitor in every part of the Union and is well known in almost every one of the 20,000 postoffices in the country. It is edited with reference to a national circulation and people of all political sides.

Lucas Wheeler has finished his haymaking and gone back to Eugene to work. Mr and Mrs J. A. Burnett have gone to Portland for medical treatment. Mrs Burnett's condition is serious. Norman Steinmeyer says he expects to burn another kiln of brick this summer.

Edith Roberts has been actually bedridden part of the week with tooth-ache.

SHIPPING AND MACHINERY.

The schooner Lizzie Price of San Francisco came in Sunday with the machinery and fixtures for G. W. Hay's new cannery. She sailed in over the bar and proceeded up to the cannery presenting a fine sight for our people as she sped up the river before the wind.

The steamer Maggie left for Portland Monday in tow of the Roberts where her machinery will be repaired, after which the craft will be ready for business once more.

The schooner Bellie arrived Friday and is loading with lumber at the Florence Lumber Co's mill.

PACIFIC ODD FELLOW.

A monthly magazine published in Portland, and exclusively devoted to the interests of Odd Fellowship, both local and general. It is the only Odd Fellow publication in Oregon and is now in its eighth year.

We have made arrangements with the publisher by which we can club "Pacific Odd Fellow" with Tim West at a rate we believe every Odd Fellow would be glad to accept.

The price of Tim West is $1.50 per year and the price of "Pacific Odd Fellow" is $1.00 per year, but we will send both to subscribers who pay a year strictly in advance for $2.00.

Call at our office and see a sample copy of "Pacific Odd Fellow."

The impudence of some people who frequently violate the law of the state is astonishing. The statement made by some of them that they cannot be punished for their wrong-doing because they own the property where they reside is ridiculous. The law does not exempt any one from its operation because he is on his own property. A crime in one place is a crime in another and is punishable as such.

A Mother Tells How She Saved Her Little Daughter's Life.

I am the mother of eight children and have had a great deal of experience with medicine. Last summer my little daughter had the dysentery in its worst form. We thought she would die. I tried everything I could think of, but nothing seemed to do her any good. I saw by an advertisement in our paper that Chemist's Colic, Coughs, and Diarrhea. Kennedy was highly recommended and sent a bottle at once. It proved to be one of the very best medicines we ever had in the house. It saved my little daughter's life. I am anxious for every mother to know what an excellent medicine it is. Had I known it at first it would have saved me a great deal of anxiety and my little daughter much suffering.—Yours truly, Mrs. Geo P. Burdick, Liberty, K. L. For sale by All Druggists.

HE Would Know More.

An exceedingly well dressed woman sat in an elevated railway car the other day, and opposite her was an elderly man. The woman got up to leave the car, and in the corner of the seat where she had been sitting the man spread a piece of black net. Jumping for it, he called out:

"Madam, you have left your veil."

As she took no notice of him he dashed down the aisle after her, and, touching her on the elbow again, said:

"Madam, you have left your veil," at the same time holding it up in full view of all.

It was a frowsy, frayed, torn piece of black cotton net.

"It is not mine, sir," she snapped out, giving him a withering look, and the oldling old man shrank back as if he had been jabbed with a hatpin, while the passengers grinned.

"Why was she so mad about it?" he asked in a dazed way as he laid the homely little rag on the window sill.

"I guess you never paid for a woman's finery," said another man.

"That's so," said the withered one in a hopeless tone. "I am a bachelor. Perhaps I'd know more if I'd married."

"You would that," said the other finally.—New York Tribune.

Resting the Muscles.

When a man is tired, he stretches his arms and legs and yawns. Birds and animals, so far as possible, follow his example.

Birds spread their feathers and also yawn, or gape. Fowls often do this. Fish yawn; they open their mouths slowly until they are round, the bones of the head seem to loosen, and the gills open.

Dogs are inveterate yawners and stretchers, but seldom sneeze unless they have a cold. Cats are always stretching their bodies, legs and claws, as every one knows who has a cat for a pet.

Horses stretch violently when after indulging in a roll, but not, as a rule, on all fours.

A stag when stretching sticks out his head, stretches his fore feet out and bows his back and neck as though trying to creep under a bar.

Most ruminant animals stretch when they rise up after lying down. Deer do it regularly; so do cows. This fact is so well known that if a cow, when arising from lying down, does not stretch herself it is a sign she is ill.

The reason for this is plain—the stretch moves every muscle of the body, and if there be any injury anywhere it hurts.—Pittsburgh Dispatch.

Measuring a Tree.

Supposing a woodchopper in the Maine forest is told to get out a mast for a yacht. He knows that he must find a tree which is straight for 60 feet below the branches. It would be very troublesome to climb trees and measure them with a tape measure, so he, without knowing it, uses practical trigonometry. He measures off 60 feet in a straight line from the tree, and then he cuts a pole, which, when upright in the ground, is exactly as tall as himself. This he plants in the earth his own length from the end of his 60 feet.

For example, if he is six feet tall, he plants his six foot pole 54 feet from the tree. Then he lies down on his back, with his head at the end of the line and his feet touching the pole, and sights over the top of it. He knows that where his eyes touch the tree is almost exactly 60 feet from the ground.—Weekly Bouquet.

Flinn Love.

That's a pathetic story of the Gordon fishing boat crew. No case of man face death more frequently than the hardy fisher tollers of the sea, and among none is a genuine heroism more frequently displayed.

The Gordon boat was manned by a father and his four sons. When the boat sank, three of the latter went with her. The old man got in ear, and soon the fourth son appeared by his side. But the old man could only support one, and the lad, taking in the situation at once, bade his parent farewell in the words, "Weed, weed, father, I must list a-wa'" and sank.

"Only readers familiar with the northern dialect will fully appreciate the depth of kindly resignation and true feeling which the words denote. The father endured terrible sufferings, but was ultimately picked up. "Greater love hath no man than this."—Westminster Gazette.
